EMPLOYES CAUGHT BY EXPLOSION

Seven men were burned about the face and hands, four of them so seriously that they were taken to the hospital, when an explosion wrecked the office of the General Express Company, in the basement at No. 15 Devonshire street, in the banking district, shortly after noon today. The injured are:

KELLEY, ROBERT J., proprietor of the company, burned about the face and hands, contusions to head; Relief Hospital.

MOEN, FRANK, manager, burned about the face and hands; Relief Hospital.

DOYLE, CHARLES H., Gloucester, burned about face and hands; Relief Hospital.

COLLINS, JOSEPH, Charlestown, burns on both hands and face; Relief Hospital.

HULL, JOHN E., of Beverly, burned about hands.

THOMPSON, JOHN, of Revere, burned about hands and face.

SULLIVAN, STEPHEN, burned about face.

Kelley with the other men was in the basement when the explosion occurred, filling the office with a sheet of flames and clouds of smoke. One of the men succeeded in reaching the Devonshire street door. The others were trapped.

The four others started for the rear windows which led to Washington street. They broke the glass and crawled out into the street, with the exception of Kelley, who is a large man. He got wedged in between the casings and there he stayed. He could neither get out or crawl back.

Ladderman Patrick Buckley of Ladder No. 1 went into the basement and got Kelley by the legs and actually pushed him out. Kelley was in a serious condition and was rushed to the hospital.

The upper part of the building is devoted to offices. The smoke curled up the stairways and elevator wells and caused a slight panic among the clerks, who fled into the street hatless and coatless.

Mr. Sayre is a graduate of the Harvard Law School.

Municipal Dances a Success, Says Mayor

Mayor Fitzgerald is gratified with the success of the municipal dances. "Last night at Cabot Street Gymnasium," said the Mayor today, "we had 600 in attendance. There was splendid order and everybody passed an enjoyable evening. Boston should not only continue but extend the scope of these properly regulated and conducted municipal dances."

Bootblack's Employer Fined.

Joseph Pullo of Stanford street was fined $10 in Municipal Court today for working thirteen-year-old Sam Sansky as a bootblack until 11:20 p. m.

ACTRESS ASKED TO WILSON WEDDING IS PRESIDENT'S NIECE

"Margaret Vale," who was forced to reveal the fact that she is a relative of the President in order to be excused from stage rehearsals while attending the White House wedding.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Because she wanted to get leave of absence to attend Jessie Wilson's wedding, "Margaret Vale," an actress who was rehearsing a minor part in the forthcoming production of "Omar the Tentmaker," was forced to reveal the fact that she is really Mrs. George Howe, a niece of President Wilson and wife of a Columbia, S. C., professor.

Professor Howe is the son of President Wilson's sister, Mrs. Howe has been on the stage for a year under the name of Margaret Vale. By revealing her identity she obtained permission to attend the wedding.

It was through the influence of Mme. Nazimova that Mrs. Howe first went on the stage. Last year, while her husband was in Rome on research work, she met Mme. Nazimova, and the actress saw talent in the young woman and offered her a part in her own company.

Mrs. Howe explained:

"My husband returned last April and when he saw how in earnest I was he consented to let me take an engagement. I don't suppose any one but a few of my personal friends recognized me as Marie, the little peasant girl, in 'Eyvind of the Hills' with Miss Goodrich.

"We are both modern in our ideas and both suffragists, and he believes that any woman who feels she has work to do, no matter into what profession or occupation it may lead her, should not be barred from doing so simply because she is married."

"Developments" to Fix Mayor's Course

"Letters Urge Me to Run," He Says; Put Screws on Curley Tonight.

Mayor Fitzgerald issued his daily bulletin on the mayoralty campaign late this afternoon.

"Developments of the next few days," he said, "will determine my course. Letters are coming in urging me to run. My personal inclinations I have already expressed."

President Joseph Maynard's dinner to the Democratic ward chairmen comes at the Quincy House tonight. Congressman James M. Curley is a ward chairman and is expected to be at the dinner. An effort may be made to induce him to withdraw in favor of the Mayor.

THAW TO PENSION SLAYER

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 20.—Harry K. Thaw today, in a remarkable letter to W. H. Vary of New York, newly-chosen Overseer of the National Grange now in session at Manchester, offers to provide the necessary funds to care for Eugene Clark, the wife slayer, in case Clark can be freed from Matteawan.

Vary, who holds the second highest office in the Patrons of Husbandry, and the one in times past aimed invariably the stepping-stone to the National Master's chair, was a personal friend of Clark. Both were directors of the Grange Fire Insurance Company.

Clark killed his wife while temporarily insane over four years ago. He was never tried, but committed to Matteawan. It is claimed he is now sane. Mr Vary made public the Thaw letter today. It read:

"May I, as a stranger, extend congratulations to you upon the honor conferred by the National Grange? As a friend of Eugene Clark I am writing this to give you the information that he is unhappy day and night in the place where he is cooped up with crazy people.

"When you visited him, he, in his kindly and patient manner, expressed as little discontent as possible. Probably he spoke contentedly to spare your feelings. Also you could see that the attendants and doctors were friendly toward him, so you were unable to realize what he suffers.

"Even physically he has ailments which cause him great pain, because there are no means for treatment in Matteawan. The doctors would like to relieve his physical sufferings, but they have not the means for the simple operation that is needed.

"The food is such that he is unable to eat, except at midnight, when the attendant shares his midnight meal with him. He cannot digest, one could you or I, the continuous diet of bread. The bread is gold, but the vegetables, except for a couple of months in the Summer, are such that Mr. Clark cannot endure them, and meat is scanty.

Order Woman to Shun Big Stores

She was given two months in the House of Correction and the sentence was suspended. She was told to stay away from department stores altogether.

Old Penny Worth $200.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—At the sale of ancient British coins at Sotheby's, Baldwin bought a very rare King Alfred penny for $200. Sphik paid $182 for a rare London half-penny.

NEW HAVEN FOUGHT IN ELECTION

The biggest vote ever cast in the history of the Boston Chamber of Commerce marked the Chamber's annual election of directors today.

At 1 o'clock more than 800 ballots had been cast in the red hot battle between the "Regulars" and the "Independents" for control of the board of directors. A continual stream of lawyers, merchants and business men poured into the Chamber building. During the lunch hour the stream became a deluge of voters.

The big vote indicated just how keen was the interest of the 4,500 members of the organization in the fight to defeat the New Haven Railroad interests in the attempt to secure the balance of power in the directorate.

The "Independent" slate was the one whose election—as representative members declared—would subject the Chamber to the New Haven interests.

The "regular" ticket was the one whose election was urged as assuring the elimination of any control of the organization by the New Haven, and as meaning that the board of directors would be broadly representative of ALL interests.

Both Sides Campaigning.

The fight between the two tickets resulted in the election becoming something of a municipal pre-election campaign for activity. Both sides in the big battle got busy today, especially on the telephone. Members were entreated to take part in the voting. One member reported seven telephone calls, four from one side and three from the other. This old-fashioned campaigning kept the interest at fever heat.

The polls opened at 11 o'clock and remained opened until 3 o'clock when the ballots were counted. About the corridors notices were posted cautioning members against "electioneering" in the balloting.

The board of judges were: Augustus S. Cobb, Sturgis Coffin, 2d, William D. Fulton, Howard L. Herrington, Clarence G. McDavitt, Walter Powers, John A. Voudry and Lyon Weyburn.

The "Regular" Slate.

The "regular" slate was: Henry S. Dennison, William C. Ewing, John H. Fahey, Edward K. Hall, Charles J. Holbrook, Frank J. Ludwig, Charles P. Wood, Sydney R. Wrightington.

In addition to the foregoing the following were nominated for one year: Elmer J. Bliss, J. Randolph Coolidge, Jr., James L. Richards, Russell Robb.

The "Independent" ticket was: Charles C. Bancroft, F. C. McDuffee, George L. Barnes, Walter C. Fish, F. A. O'Connell, Arthur L. Robinson.

Williams Free After 38 Years

Rides from Prison in First Auto He Ever Saw.

Lieutenant John Rooney of the District Attorney's office went to the State Prison today with a pardon for Ambrose Williams, a sixty-three-year-old colored man, who had served thirty-eight years in prison. Warden Bridges shook Williams' hand, and Lieutenant Rooney brought the old man—in the first automobile he had ever seen—back to Boston. "I miss the horses," said Williams. He thought the State House a big building and said the elevators were "fine things." The old man stopped to thank Assistant District Attorney Lavelle, who secured his pardon, and then left for New York, where Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth is to place him in the Home for Discharged Prisoners.

Harvard-Yale Game Tickets $40 to $100

Speculators Get Pasteboards and Ask Record Prices.

Do you want to go to the Harvard-Yale game? Did you think tickets were scarce? Here's an advertisement from one of today's papers:

"FOR SALE—Limited number of Harvard-Yale football tickets, to private parties only. Apply, etc."

There's the speculator side of it. One Harvard undergraduate with no particular dread of the blackhat advertised also that he had two tickets for sale and wanted to know how much he was offered for them. Current prices are from $40 a pair in the bowl to $100 a pair on the 40-yard line.

'U. S. Far Behind in Child Labor Reform'

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The United States is far behind other nations in dealing with the child labor question, according to General Bramwell Booth, head of the Salvation Army.

"We ought to make the foreign children," said General Booth today, "who come to our shores and raise them to the level of our own children.

"The employment of children in factories is against their future development. Juvenile labor in this country is surreptitious. It is very difficult to reconcile the providential plan with the neglect and suffering of children."

Harvard Men Gave 'Coppers' for Band

The Harvard football committee which is settling the question of a band for the Harvard-Yale game is honored because students who attended the football mass meeting last night contributed "coppers" instead of larger coins. The committee today started a campaign to raise $50 more than the $113 taken in last night.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Sir Thomas Lipton was arrested at Streatham today for exceeding the speed limit with his motor car and was fined $50.

CHILDREN STARVING IN MEXICO CAPITAL

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Upon the personal request of Lord Cowdray, head of the vast Pearson interests in Mexico, the United States embassy today cabled in Washington asking that protection be extended to all the property of the Pearson syndicate in Mexico. Lord Cowdray had expressed the wish that American warships be kept at Tampico to prevent destruction of his oil properties there.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 20.—Famine threatens hundreds of residents of this city. Supplies are already short and prices are so high that the poorer classes have been compelled to stop buying entirely.

Only the wealthier people are able to purchase food supplies that a few months ago were within the reach of all. Scores of children march the streets, begging for victuals. Hatred for General Huerta is growing among the lower classes, as they blame him for the shortage of food.

Popular Uprising Feared.

Foreign residents of the city fear that the first intimation of a revolutionary army approaching the city will be a signal for an uprising. There is no danger at present, as the soldiers have the masses cowed, but if the garrison were depleted in sending troops out to rout the rebels, there is no doing that a perilous situation would develop.

Friends of General Blanquet say that he and Huerta have adjusted their differences and are now working in harmony. As long as this lasts Huerta will save the army at his call. The city hall is now filled with reports of a violent quarrel between Huerta and Blanquet. The dictator and Blanquet were reported to be at loggerheads were almost every phase of government policy.

Huerta Levies New Tax.

Basing his justification upon the ground of military necessity, Huerta has issued a decree declaring a tax of eight cents a kilogram on the production of cotton. This is a heavy additional burden upon the people, who are already groaning beneath a load of excess taxation.

Huerta evidently hopes to offset the

WIFE FORGIVES SWAIN; WOULD PUNISH WOMAN

FALMOUTH, Nov. 20.—Mrs. John H. Swain, whose husband, it is reported, has eloped with Ethel Florence Souther, is eager to forgive him and welcome him home, it became known today. Swain was superintendent of the Falmouth schools and disappeared last week. Hundreds of men and boys joined the hunt for him before the elopement report gained circulation.

The State police have postponed action in the case for a few days, awaiting Mrs. Swain's direction. Mrs. Swain, after a conference with Ernest S. Bradford, state officer at Hyannis, has been confined to her bed. She is convinced her husband loves her, yet is anxious to punish Mr. Souther if the elopement story proves to be true.

The police cannot act without the evidence in Mrs. Swain's possession. Falmouth people sympathize strongly with Mrs. Swain that it has been suggested she be allowed to fill out her husband's unexpired term and draw his salary.

NURSE'S SUIT FOR $40,000 IN HANDS OF JURY

Miss Henry, testifying today in his own defence in Miss Jessie Almon's $40,000 suit against him as administrator of the estate of his uncle, the late William Irwin of Dorchester, declared that the young woman had been an excellent companion for his uncle. He was the last witness. The case went to the jury this afternoon.

In court today, two counts in the suit have been eliminated. The first related to Miss Almon's claim that Irwin had promised to adopt her as his daughter when she worked for him as nurse and housekeeper.

The second count related to Miss Almon's claim that Irwin promised to leave her a share of his estate when he died.

The third count—relating to Miss Almon's demand for payment for her services during the six years in Irwin's house and her claim that she had spent $500 or more out of her own pocket in buying supplies for his house—was the one left to be passed upon by the jury.

"Overwork Makes Young Criminals"

Representative McEttrick Gives Reason for Rigid Child Labor Law.

McEttrick, one of the originators of the agitation for child labor legislation, before the State Board of Labor and Industry today.

The board gave a hearing at the State House to allow the public an opportunity to criticise and suggest amendments to the new child labor laws.

CITY-PLANNING CONGRESS ENDS WITH BANQUET

The first city planning congress ever held in this State came to an end last evening with a banquet at Ford Hall under the auspices of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

The Homestead Commission, which was responsible for this gathering of Mayors, manufacturers and citizens, all interested in how to make their towns and cities better places in which to work and live, were congratulated upon the success of their initial attempt at State co-operation.

Governor Foss struck the keynote when he declared that the planning boards in each town and city would undoubtedly bring about a common understanding and a co-operation that would save the State millions of dollars by preventing the piece-meal kind of improvements that have been the rule in the past.

Mayor John F. Fitzgerald made a plea for a working plan that would include the towns within ten miles of Boston in a comprehensive unified scheme that, while not causing each town to lose its identity, would make it possible to create common utility boards, fire departments and police systems.

Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, took part in the discussion on how to finance the housing of workmen earning $25, $18 and $13 a week. He cited as examples of successful, cheap, satisfactory home building the plan that was worked out in Ely, England, and other English garden cities. He suggested that banks become more liberal in their system of small loans on easy payments.

Rice, the youngest child, now nine, has been reared by Ida Mosher of Hudson, and the court proceedings were the result of the action of the oldest sister, Mildred Rice of Leominster, in taking her small brother away from Mrs. Mosher to bring up herself. She has won her fight. The father has been missing since the mother's death, eight years ago.

35,000 READY FOR BIG STRIKE AT FALL RIVER

FALL RIVER, Nov. 20.—Imminent danger of a great labor war that will involve the 35,000 mill workers here on December 8 was emphasized still further today when the mill firemen were notified to meet in special session to-morrow night and prepare their demands for higher wages for immediate presentation to the employers.

Three hundred mill firemen hold membership in the local union of their calling. That they will demand at least a 12½ per cent. wage increase, the rate asked for by the 35,000 mill operatives, is said to be assured. This makes the chain complete. It lines the A. F. of L. unions up solidly for the anticipated fight, in case the management of the mills refuse the concessions asked for.

Parents Ask Aid in Finding Lost Boy

The aid of the Boston AMERICAN has been asked in the search for Elliot Armand, fifteen, who left his home at No. 612 Park street, October 25. His description follows: Height, five feet, seven inches; dark hair, hazel eyes, scar over left eye; wore gray suit, black shoes, and wears hair in pompadour fashion. His parents believe that he fears punishment if he returns, and wish to assure him of good treatment.

BLUE AND DISCOURAGED

Mrs. Hamilton Tells How She Finally Found Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Warren, Ind.—"I was bothered terribly with female weakness. I had pains and was not regular, my head ached all the time, I had bearing down pains and my back hurt me the biggest part of the time, I was dizzy and had weak feelings when I would stoop over, it hurt me to walk any distance and I felt blue and discouraged.

"I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now in good health. If it had not been for that medicine I would have been in my grave a long time ago."—MRS. ARTIE E. HAMILTON, R. F. D. No. 6, Warren, Ind.

Another Case.

Esmond, R. I.—"I write to tell you how much good your medicine has done me and to let other women know that there is help for them. I suffered with bearing down pains, headache, was irregular and felt blue and depressed all the time. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and commenced to gain in a short time, and I am a well woman today. I am on my feet from early morning until late at night running a boarding house, and do all my own work. I hope that many suffering women will try your medicine. It makes happier wives and mothers."—MRS. ANNA HANSEN, Esmond, Rhode Island.

SEEK MISSING NEPHEW OF FIRE COMMISSIONER

The police today continued a more strenuous investigation and search for Winslow W. Cole, sixteen-year-old nephew of Fire Commissioner Charles H. Cole, who disappeared from the Y. M. C. A. at Newton Tuesday afternoon, and hasn't been seen since.

Although his father, Alfred Q. Cole, of No. 35 Otis street, Newtonville, has done everything possible, no trace of him has yet been found.

Tuesday afternoon, according to the boy's father, Winslow left his home at Newtonville to go to the Newton Y. M. C. A., where he was a member of the gymnasium class. He remained there until nearly 6 o'clock.

Young Cole wore a gray knickerbocker suit with a Norfolk jacket, black shoes and stockings and a blue cloth golf cap. He and no overcoat, but under his jacket wore a gray coat sweater with the white initials "B. S. A." on the left breast. He is about five feet five inches in height, and slender, with light hair and complexion, and hazel eyes.

Boston Wife Goes to Moulthrop in Jail

Visits Man Accused of Forgery, After Lewis Letter Expose.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Following him from New York to this city, Mrs. Sidney Moulthrop, who was Miss Nellie Sherer of Boston, has visited her husband, formerly clerk to Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, in jail here, where he waits trial on a charge of forgery, who is accused of being the author of the famous Pindell letter. Moulthrop has made no effort to obtain bail, and refused to make any statement further than a reiteration of the denial that he wrote the threatening letters received by President Wilson and Senator Lewis.

Charmed White Deer Is Slain

GREAT BARRINGTON, Nov. 20.—Charles A. Franklin of Greenfield has shot the famous white deer that for four years has been sought by hunters at Mt. Washington in vain every open season. A superstitious belief existed that it could never be shot.

WHO wants this baby? This is little Irene Potter, whose mother will give her away when she is assured of a good home for the child.

Mrs. Rose Potter of No. 748 Dudley street, Roxbury, has an eleven-months-old daughter, Irene, whom she is anxious to give away to anyone who can furnish a good home for the child. She says:

"Of course I have a mother's love for the baby. But what are you going to do when you haven't the means to bring it up as you would like to see it brought up. Anybody who wants the baby will have to show me that they can give it the kind of home I want it to have. I want a respectable home very ill, and a good home.

"Irene was born in Boston and will be a year old December 7. I want to give her away for her own sake, not for mine. I will give anyone a full surrender on the child.

"It doesn't matter what my fortune may be after I have put baby in a good home. My husband will never claim the child."

BELIEVE WOMAN KIDNAPED BOY OF ARTIST EARLE

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Developments in the kidnaping by Ferdinand Pinney Earle of his son, Harold, point to the identity of Earle's woman companion in the adventure as Miss Charlotte Herman, daughter of Paul Herman, a printer, who lives at No. 138 Home avenue, Rutherford, N. J., and whose family, including the young woman, had a summer home for two seasons near Earle's country place in Monroe, Orange County, N. Y.

From all accounts the woman played a very clever part in obtaining possession of the child. She gained admission to the Ecole d'Arguitaine, at La Motte-Beuvron, Ensaere, on the ground that she wished to learn French. Miss Fischbacher said she was already adept both in French and German, and hence must have had many difficulties in the daily life there to appear unable to understand probably plain allusions to herself in daily contact with family life.

Miss Fischbacher believes the fugitives are headed for America.

OUTBREAK BY NAVAJOES IS FEARED NOW

FARMINGTON, N. M., Nov. 20.—The 400 renegade Navajo Indians encamped on Beautiful Mountain, twenty-five miles southwest of the Shiprock Agency sang war songs and danced around council fires all night, while sentries stood watch at the many signal fires which fringed the northeastern side of the mesa.

At Shiprock extra precautions had been taken against night attack by followers of Chief Ba Sho She, who have been wrought almost to a state of frenzy by their medicine men.

W. T. Shelton, Indian agent, and his Indian police, who are still faithful, today began preparations to renew overtures to the aborigines.

Traders and settlers on the reservation have appealed to Agent Shelton for protection.

BEVERLY MEN IN TERROR OVER HEEL SHOP RAID

The conviction of Isaiah Kenney, a pillar of the Beverly Baptist Church and an instructor in the Foss Bible Class in that church, of statutory offenses, has stirred Beverly profoundly. The entire city is divided. On one side are the partisans of Kenney, and on the other those who believe he was justly convicted.

The church is preparing to expel Kenney, who has been an active and prominent member for forty years. The police and Mayor McDonald say they have even more evidence against Kenney than they have yet produced. Kenney's friends declare the charges against him are untrue, and Kenney himself calls them "spite work" and declares he will give startling testimony when his case comes before the Superior Court.

This threat on Kenney's part has frightened a good number of Beverly men who are said to have visited the beautifully furnished room in his heel factory where Kenney, Lena Temming and Robert Woods—a prominent Beverly man—were arrested. Chief Woodbury and Mayor McDonald deny that the police have a list of these men; but their denial has not ended the terror that sensational exposures may follow the case.

"Today in Beverly every knot of men was discussing the situation with the deepest concern. The city is stirred as it has not been stirred for years. There is a good deal of quiet talk that 'the same Kenney is an old man,' the charges against him might well be dropped and not prosecuted in the Superior Court. There is a disposition not to talk too much about the possible exposures.

Mrs. Kenney is her husband's staunchest defender. She declares the charges against him are false. She went his bond for $1,500 and is supporting him in his preparations to defend himself. She said:

ISAIAH S. KENNEY, Beverly man who says he is wrongly held on serious charge.

FIND COURTNEY DEAD IN WATER AT COHASSET

The body of John J. Courtney, a retired Boston insurance man who has been missing since Saturday, was found today in the water near Kimball Hotel, Cohasset. A note found in the pocket of Courtney's coat was declared by the Cohasset authorities to be strongly suggestive of suicide. The police refuse to make public the contents of the note.

Courtney was sixty-five years old and an expert swimmer. He had been in ill health for several years. Last July he went to Cohasset to board. He was formerly general attorney in America of the Imperial Insurance Company of London. He was of striking build, fond of walking and bathed every day up to last Saturday, despite the coldness of the water.

FEEBLE MAN'S PLEA FOR PART OF SON'S ESTATE

Joel Hayden, Sr., very old and feeble, hard of hearing and almost blind, testified today in his appeal from the decision of the Probate Court allowing the will by which his son, Joel Hayden, Jr., left $50,000 to Mrs. Georgie E. McCabe, a saleswoman.

The old man was once a millionaire. His father was Lieutenant-Governor of the State under Governor John A. Andrew. Today he is penniless, facing the alms-house unless he can win a few dollars from his son's estate.

Mrs. McCabe, a woman of fifty-five with two daughters, lives at No. 692 Huntington avenue. She testified yesterday that she met young Hayden when he came to her house to purchase a dog in 1895, and that from that time they were friends.

Supported to Stand.

The old man was supported to the witness stand today by his attorney. "Raise your voice, so the foreman of the jury can hear," the attorney told him.

The weak old eye tried to focus on the foreman's face and gave up. "I can't see him," Mr. Hayden quavered feebly. Throughout his testimony his eyes were fixed dimly on a point across the room near where Mrs. McCabe sat.

"My son was always very pleasant to me," the father said. "Most of the time we lived in Winthrop.

"I remember once he spoke to me about some letters that had come to him. Some day that woman will be the death of me.' That was what he said.

"I asked him, 'Why don't you quit her, boy?'

"'Well, father, I can't,' he replied. 'She's got a hold on me and it's a hold that I cannot break.'

Left Father Alone.

"My son did many strange things. Once he left me in the South Station while he went for a ticket. We were both going out on the train. He didn't come, and at last I went home. I found him there. 'I changed my mind,' he said.

"Another time we were on the cars and he jumped off and left me. Once he left me home to get shaved. My boy had been drinking when he came back. He did not stagger, but he talked wildly.

"Once, after he had been out, he said to me: 'I've been out to the old woman's on Huntington avenue.' I asked: 'What does she do to you?' He answered: 'They're people you don't want to know. They're not in your class.'

"Once when I lived near Providence, I wrote him asking for money to pay my room rent. So my son knew I had no money, you see.

"He sometimes took pills that he bought at a drug store. They made him silly for two or three hours afterward."

Mrs. McCabe on the stand today said that Hayden never took drugs. She declared she gave him money often. "He asked me to marry him," she declared, "but I put him off, for he had an unsteady work and I had my daughters to consider."

Mother Offers Her Home to Mrs. Walker

Arguments Begin in Divorce Suit Against Lieutenant.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 20.—Arguments were begun today in Mrs. Nina Chinn Walker's suit against Lieutenant J. W. G. Walker for separate maintenance. Before the arguments began, however, Mrs. Walker's counsel put her mother, Mrs. Chinn, on the stand. Mrs. Chinn said:

"My home here in Newport is open to my daughter and her four children, and always will be."

Depositions were read from Dr. James Oscar Scott of Washington, Mrs. Jennie Collings of Roxbury and Margaret E. Crawford of Boston.

JEALOUSY OVER BIDS TO WHITE HOUSE WEDDING

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Regardless of the fact that the White House is not the most commodious mansion on the earth, and that the East room can scarcely accommodate more than 500 or 600 guests at a time, the invitation list for the coming marriage of Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson to Francis Sayre of New York is charged with the awful responsibility of having started a real social war.

There are recriminations and heart burnings already. Everybody in Washington who considers herself, or more particularly herself and husband, as members of upper tendom, has thought that she at least would receive the coveted card. Instead, adhering strictly to the desire of the White House family that the wedding should be as quiet and dignified as possible and that at all hazards, social or otherwise, there should be no "crush" at the most important function of the season, the number of invited guests has been kept down to 600.

The invitation includes, in addition to the intimate friends of the President's family, the Senators and their wives and heads of embassies and diplomatic missions. Of the representatives and their wives only such as are numbered among the personal acquaintances of the Wilson family have been invited.

Even in the cabinet circle the invitations are not scattered so broadly as to include the entire household of some of the most conspicuous officials.

Simple Prescription Wonderful Kidney and Bladder Cure

The following simple prescription has become famous on account of its remarkable cures in cases of kidney and bladder ailments. Get six ounces of good pure gin and add to it one-half ounce Murax Compound and one-half ounce fluid extract Buchu. Take one to two teaspoonfuls of this mixture after each meal and at bed time. It quickly relieves backache, rheumatic pains in the joints, and other well known symptoms which can hardly be mentioned here. The ingredients can be had at any good drug store and are easily mixed. Be sure to use good pure gin. Also make sure to use the genuine Murax Compound, which comes in a sealed wooden tube, as imitations will not give the desired results.

For children in case of bladder weakness, give ten to fifteen drops diluted in a little water at bed time.

The real serious forms of kidney disease can be avoided if the above treatment is taken in time.

Many local druggists say this has had a great demand for the past 8 years. Published by the Standard Chemical Co. Laboratories of Chicago, Ill.

Thief Declares He Was Robbed Twice

John Davis was arraigned in South Boston today charged with stealing $686 from one of Peter M. Leavitt's collection wagons, September 24. He pleaded guilty and was held for the Grand Jury, after telling the police that he had spent the money on two trips to New York and one to Canada, and that he himself had been robbed twice since his robbery.

Charge Bankrupt with Hiding Assets

On a complaint of fraud in connection with his bankruptcy proceedings, Jacob Simes, a wholesale fruit dealer, was held by United States Commissioner Hayes today in $2,000 for the Federal Grand Jury. It is claimed by the trustee, Frank H. Jenkins, that the defendant concealed $1,000 cash and $500 in fruit from his creditors.

BEILIS' OWN STORY OF RUSSIAN CRUELTY

Ritual Case Defendant Describes Abuse and Tortures in the Dungeon.

KIEV, Nov. 20.—The first and only extended interview given by Mendel Beilis since his release from prison was accorded to the AMERICAN correspondent today. Permission for Beilis to talk was given in recognition of the great help extended to the Jewish race by the Hearst newspapers in the United States in calling public attention to the Beilis affair.

For more than an hour Beilis, seated in the little parlor of his own home, lived over again the trouble and sufferings of the last two and a half years. Sometimes he was so overcome by the memories as to break down and sob, necessitating a wait until he composed himself. This is his statement:

"In March 1911 the body of Yushinsky was found in the brick works where I was employed. I had been busy all day and did not pay much attention to the discovery—in fact, it was only on the day of the funeral that a friend of mine, Mr. Zacharchenko, who owned the house where Vera Cheberyak lives, said to me:

Spies Came to House.

"'You know, Mendel, I have just been to the Yushinsky funeral, where a lot of handbills were distributed, stating that the rotten Jews killed Yushinsky.'

"Even then I did not pay much attention to my friend's words until three months later, when the prosecuting attorney called at my home. He examined it thoroughly and also the brick works, and then left. A day or two later a lot of spies dressed as tramps came to my house. They behaved like wild animals, talked about 'ritual murder' and tried to frighten me. Then I heard from friends Vera Cheberyak was telling everybody I had killed the boy. Some time elapsed and then I received another visit from the prosecuting attorney, who again examined my house. He asked:

"'Why, haven't you got a mazuza?' (Jewish talisman).

"I replied that as I was employed in the brickworks where a lot of Christians worked, I could not be strictly orthodox. With that he left.

Story of Arrest.

"At 3 o'clock in the morning of July 22, 1911, while asleep, I was awakened by a loud noise like a cannon exploding. I got up, opened the door, and the sight which I saw frightened me nearly to death. There were a lot of policemen, a regiment of soldiers and the attorney.

"'Are you Beilis?' the attorney asked.

"I made answer, 'I am.'

"'You are under arrest.'

"I asked 'why?'

"There was no reply. I trembled like a leaf. My house was surrounded; my wife fainted, my children were crying. Dazed with fear, I heard them tell me to dress, as I would be taken to prison.

"Arriving there they put me into a cell and half an hour later I heard a child crying and screaming. Listening carefully I recognized the voice of my son David, then eight years old. My heart almost stopped beating. 'Horror,' I exclaimed and then I began to knock my head against the cell wall in my grief.

"Shortly after the governor of the prison came to my cell, saying: 'The little son of Vera Cheberyak says he was playing with Yushinsky in the brick works and your son says they were not. Your son is a big liar; that is why he was arrested. He refused to listen to my explanation.'

Threatened with Siberia.

"I began to cry, saying I did not know why I was in prison. He replied:

"'We will send you to Siberia if you don't tell me the truth.'

"After given prison clothes I was taken to a cell with sixty other prisoners. It was damp, dark and cold, with a cement floor. My fellow prisoners were quarrelling and crying and swearing all at once. It was awful. I did not know whether I was dead or alive.

"When night arrived, everybody took places on the floor, where we slept. I lay next to a man in chains, who was silently going to Siberia.

"'Are you not afraid to be sleeping next to me?' he asked. I made answer, 'No, my brother.'

"'But I can strangle you with these chains; just see,' he said. He attempted to show me, when the other prisoners interfered, telling him not to frighten me. This started a violent quarrel in which all took part, ending with the governor of the prison appearing and ordering all to punishment in the solitary cell for eight days, on black bread and water.

Was Threatened with Siberia, Was Half Frozen, Beaten and Nearly Strangled.

"At the expiration of that time I was taken to another cell containing thirty men, all murderers and burglars. They also knew about my case, and the majority of them believed me innocent, although a few were against me. It was here that I received my first beating.

"My feet were bleeding from the nails in the rough prison shoes I wore. I sat down on a small bench, when a fellow-prisoner struck me in the face, bringing blood. It was pouring from my mouth, and I began to cry. The governor appeared and noticed my swollen face. He asked me who did it, and some one pointed out the man. The governor knocked him down and asked why he did it.

"'Because he killed a Christian boy,' the man replied.

"The Governor transferred me to another cell where there were only twelve others. Another month passed when I was taken again before the prosecuting attorney, who told me that the black hair discovered on Yushinsky's clothing corresponded with that which an official tore out from my head and beard in a very painful way.

"While the prosecutor so informed me again, I asked why an, innocent man should be kept in prison, but they only laughed.

"I had not seen or heard one word from my wife and children, but one day a fellow prisoner named Kazatchenko offered to smuggle a letter out for me to Mrs. Beilis. Although I was frightened I wrote a short letter asking after herself and the children. In a few days a reply came saying they were all alive.

Tricked by Spy.

"Then Kazatchenko suggested another letter, and, as my glasses had been taken away from me, he offered to write it, to which I agreed. But instead of writing what I said, he wrote an entirely different letter. Later I discovered he was a spy.

"As a result of this second letter, I was put into a separate cell, four yards by three. It was terribly cold and damp, with an iron table and bench, and a small window near the ceiling, from which it was impossible to see anything, even the sky. That night I did not sleep. There were no mattress and bedclothes, and I was almost frozen with the cold.

"I walked the floor for hours, until finally, exhausted, I fell on my bench. For ten months I was in that awful cell. I suffered dreadfully, especially during the long, cold Winter months. My one longing was to see the sky, but alas, that was impossible.

"At length one of my feet became frostbitten, and eventually they removed me to the prison hospital. Then I was taken back to the cold cell, where I spent a month and a half. Then the story of my indictment was shown to me for the first time. I read it several times, and came to realize that the situation was not so hopeless. I knew there was no evidence against me, and my hopes began to centre on my acquittal."

CHESTER JOINS THE FLEET OFF VERA CRUZ

foreign "financial starvation" policy inaugurated by President Wilson and supported by the Powers, and raise enough money through domestic means to pay his troops and run the government. It is possible, however, that Huerta will thus alienate the big landed interests.

The Mexican Congress will meet today in direct defiance of the demands of the United States.

General Huerta will transmit a message to the Senate and Chamber of Deputies. In this he will defend his whole course in dealing with the recent Congress which was controlled by followers of Francisco I. Madero, and will declare that his course has not interrupted the regime of constitutional government.

There is no doubt that both the Senate and Chamber of Deputies will indorse the dictator's actions. Today's events are fraught with momentous consequences as concerns the relations between the United States and Mexico.

The utmost tension prevails among officials of the Mexican government. They do not know what they will next perpetrate. Fear prevails among all the foreign residents of the Mexican capital. Members of the diplomatic corps refuse to discuss the situation, saying: "We will await events."

Defends Arrest of Members.

In his message Huerta will defend his arrest of members of the last House of Deputies, saying the executive was not lacking in foresight, but, understanding at once the point to which the attitude of the national assembly was tending, tried all means possible to avoid a conflict. He maintained that once thus impression as executive his rights and prerogatives, Congress had become by the resisting of certain elements a center of revolutionary activity, a sort of open agency of the northern rebels, who, with arms in hands, engaged in murder and pillage.

Having arrived at this critical juncture, Huerta will continue, "The government under my charge was placed in a dilemma, either to permit the Chamber of Deputies to be converted into a demagogical convention by strangling the other two powers of government, namely, the executive and judicial, and to drag the country into an abyss of bloody anarchy, thus causing the inevitable loss of our nationality, or as a legitimate defensive act in behalf of the public welfare to set aside for a short time the so-called National Assembly and call the people to the polls in order that they as a sovereign faction might say the last word."

Refers to Napoleon.

The message will admit the extremity of the measure in dissolving Congress, at the same time pleading that all acts were of a constitutional nature. Napoleon is quoted in the following paragraph:

"While the justice and utility of these acts may be the subject of controversy, yet in the end they shall always be subject to the motto of the great Napoleon: 'The law is not violated when the Fatherland is saved.'"

Even the rigidity of the measures employed is apparently considered by Huerta as being temperate under the circumstances, for he will say in this connection:

"It was not too much, therefore, that my government should resort to them in the absence of legislative power, but this National Assembly may not fail to recognize how great has been the moderation of the executive not decreeing extraordinary powers and executing the same excepting in three of the branches of government, namely, the treasury, interior and war.

"Messrs. nators and Deputies, this is a most solemn moment in every respect, and on that is likely to prove decisive for the future of the nation. Not only the eyes of 15,000,000 Mexicans but those of the entire civilized world are at this time watching us."

The final paragraphs exhort the legislators to devote every effort to national reconstruction.

Display of Troops Lacking.

Leaders of both Houses of Congress held conferences which lasted long after midnight. At these the final plans were made for the legislative work. The display of troops which usually has marked the convening of the National Assembly was missing today, showing Huerta's strong belief in his domination of the membership of that body. There was but a handful of soldiers detailed to Parliament Hall to prevent the doorway from becoming blocked by onlookers.

Charge O'Shaughnessy of the American embassy called during the day on Admiral Von Hintze, the German minister, but no significance was attached to the meeting.

Following the departure of Lieutenant Colonel Luis Figueroa for the city of Puebla, for Washington, reports were current that he was sent upon a secret diplomatic mission to bring about an effort at compromise between the American and Mexican governments, but this was not generally credited. Another report had it that Fuentes was the personal agent from Huerta to attempt to purchase a consignment of war supplies in United States for quick delivery.

U. S. IS PREPARED TO LAND MARINES IF ACTION IS NEEDED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—There is strong fear in administration circles here that Admiral Fletcher, commanding the American warships on the east coast of Mexico, will have to land marines and blackjackets at Tampico and Tuxpan to protect the property of foreigners there.

The conviction that marines were soon to be landed was strengthened today with the news that the United States scout cruiser Chester had reached the harbor at Vera Cruz late last night, and at dawn today was riding at anchor about 400 yards from the first line battleship, Rhode Island and about 200 yards from the gunboat Wheeling. With the Chester's arrival, 1,350 men can now be landed upon a moment's notice from the scout cruiser, the Wheeling and the Rhode Island.

Admiral Fletcher must land forces to prevent the British or German ships from acting, it is believed. It is reported in military circles that Admiral Fletcher has been advised by the President to land men if it becomes necessary. The administration is resolved that if any troops are landed, they shall be American.

The crisis has been precipitated by the attitude of the rebels. Not only have they forfeited the administration's sympathy, but they have broken off negotiations with William Bayard Hale, President Wilson's personal representative, and they have openly threatened, it is asserted, to open the oil tanks at Tampico and Tuxpan and waste the oil.

It is believed that the British cruisers en route from Barbadoes en rush orders will if necessary to protect these oil tanks—which are owned by British subjects—land marines unless the United States has already done so.

Official Washington received a shock today when it was learned that Rear Admiral Craddock of the British squadron, will outrank Rear Admiral Fletcher, commanding the American battleships at Vera Cruz. Under naval custom therefore, on the arrival of the British ships at Vera Cruz the British admiral will take rank as the senior officer present.

The best opinion here is that several happenings have hastened a crisis, and that seventy-two hours must see some decisive step on the part of the administration—or see Huerta returned to power. Among the vital events cited are the following:

The meeting of the Mexican Senate and House of Deputies on Monday and the organization of the two houses of Congress.

The announcement by General Huerta that he will send a message to the Congress today.

The report that Huerta has obtained additional funds.

The breaking off of the exchanging of views between General Carranza, head of the revolutionists, and Dr. William Bayard Hale, personal representative of the President.

The wholesale execution of the Huerta army officers captured by Pancho Villa at Juarez.

The wholesale and ruthless killing of federal officers and men at Victoria yesterday by the revolutionists.

The threat of the revolutionists to "run out every gallon of oil belonging to British concessionaires and stored in the great oil tanks at Tuxpan."

The sending of three British cruisers to Mexican waters by the British government.

Various denials were made at the White House today that new instructions have been sent to Charge O'Shaughnessy at Mexico City. Reports that any communication presaging a change of policy on the part of the United States had been sent by President Wilson or Secretary of State Bryan were denounced as fabrication.

SAVE YOUR HAIR! IF FALLING OUT OR DANDRUFF—25-CENT DANDERINE

Ladies! Men! Here's the quickest, surest dandruff cure known.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy, and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be, after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Mt. Holyoke Girls to Meet Council

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 20.—Scores of pretty Mount Holyoke College girls are scheduled to attend the first meeting of the City Council in their new office building next Monday night. The invitation was extended through Henry Lasker, president of the upper board. Mayor Dennison has transferred his office furniture into the new building, which is one of the handsomest and best equipped in the country.

Fire Near Theatre; No Alarm Shown

Patrons of the Majestic Theatre remained undisturbed at 10:30 last night, when fire broke out on the third floor of No. 211 Tremont street, in the premises occupied by the Harding Uniform and Regalia Company. The loss was nominal.

Chase in Subway for Alleged Thief

Commuters in the subway were thrown into an uproar early today when an alleged pickpocket, trapped in the act of robbing a laborer, leaped from a car and was pursued along the tracks leading north from the Scollay square station. He was captured after a short battle by Patrolmen Andrews and Cairness of the Court square station. The prisoner gave his name as James Doherty, twenty-six, and said he lived at No. 58 Myrtle street, Beacon Hill. He was booked on a charge of attempted larceny.

To Parole Fifty Slayers.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 20.—Fifty men convicted of killing will be liberated from the penitentiary before Thanksgiving under the new parole act. "Big Brothers" or other sponsors will assume charge of them.

Applying This Paste Makes Hair Vanish

(Toilet Tips.)

The popularity of the delatone treatment for removing hairy growths is due largely to the fact that it is quick in action and does not mar the skin, and since its introduction many beauty experts use it in preference to the electric needle. To remove the hair or fuzz, you mix some powdered delatone with a little water and apply to the objectionable hairs; then in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have entirely vanished. Excepting in rare instances, one treatment is sufficient. Adv.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The Electric Motor Sales, which closed in the Copley-Plaza last evening, created no end of new interest in this class of motor vehicle which is destined to cut a more prominent figure in the streets of this city. Conservative Boston has ever been loath to accept as an everyday matter the electric motor vehicle, especially in view of the experiences of years ago, but the time is close at hand when they will come into their own and nobody will do her shopping, visiting and opera riding by means of one of these thoroughly up-to-date and comfortable motor cars.

This condition cannot, however, be obtained in a single moment. It will come only as the result of constant effort to advance and prove the excellency of this particular class of vehicle. This can be done in many ways, but it has never been given such a convincing and effective argument as that presented during the show, which established a rather unique record for itself inasmuch as it was a show where no efforts were made to secure sales.

It was simply a dress parade of handsomely constructed, finely appointed and perfectly finished vehicles and presented a rare appearance of dignity and quietness. The lack of the commercial spirit was most prominent and the pleasure of the visitors was not marred by the alluring chatter of salesmen. Several vehicles practically every dealer on the floor reported actual sales of cars while many others secured a list of prospects which they hope to develop in the near future.

Several teas, luncheons and dinner parties were given by individuals during the show. The salon was the distinct social event of the week and its influence on the electric motor vehicle business was immeasurable.

George Kimball of the Healey-Kimball Company is at present visiting the Hudson plant in Detroit, endeavoring to increase the allotment of the big six Hudson and bring about an early distribution of the little six, of which he has already made many sales in this section.

C. P. Rockwell, in a letter from Kenosha, reaffirms his great belief in the forty four and six. He says that the six-cylinder is already in Boston and its appearance and ability have already been displayed to New Englanders. This car is a leader in its class and Mr. Rockwell is honest in his belief and conviction that the forty four will receive as cordial a reception as that which was accorded the six.

MAY SUMMON 'UNDERGROUND' BENEFICIARIES

There is dissatisfaction among the members of the Public Service Commission at the lack of real information in the "underground fund" vouchers which have been filed by the New Haven road thus far with the board.

One member of the board declared today: "Several hundred vouchers have been submitted, but practically none of them contained the information which the board is seeking, namely, the exact purposes for which the New Haven beneficiaries were employed, and the exact nature of their work.

"One voucher, for instance, filed last week, shows that one Daniel J. Shea received a certain amount of money for travelling and conversation. But nothing was said relative to the nature of this conversation.

"When all the vouchers have been submitted, I shall ask that the board call some of these beneficiaries before us, as well as some of the company's officials, to explain the vouchers."

Governor Foss, it was stated today by one of the Governor's confidential advisers, is of the opinion that the commission should, if necessary, summon some of the New Haven officials.

It is said that the Governor soon may formally call for such action by the Public Service Commission.

'Beverly Schools for Beverly Teachers'

One hundred and fifty women have registered in Beverly to vote at the school committee election December 9. The candidates are Miss Mary Smith, who has been on the committee fifteen years, and Mrs. A. J. Cheney, a former teacher in Haverhill. Mrs. Cheney's platform is "Let Beverly girls teach Beverly schools."

Two Towns Put Ban on the Tango

Whitman Chief Warns Dancer Out of Town, AND THAT GOES.

The purity wave has struck the towns of Whitman and Milford, and the tango is no more, as far as they are concerned. This includes the tango and all its allied forms, trots, animal dances and anything with a strange name or stranger movement.

Chief Brouillard of Whitman, who first issued the order, put it into effect when he saw a Rockland man and a Whitman girl tripping it at the Town Hall. He sternly told the lady in the case to sit down and behave, and the young man was not only chased from the hall, but warned that he had better leave town.

And now comes the Milford Board of Selectmen with a vote abolishing all such dances and calling upon the police officials to enforce the law.

Disagree on Twambley Suit.

LOWELL, Nov. 20.—The jury disagreed today in the libel suit of Edgar F. Twambley against Frederick S. Clark of Billerica. Twambley sued for $25,000, alleging that Clark sent out defamatory and untruthful statements during his recent campaign for selectman.

MAGGIE TEYTE,—OH, SO MODEST—DONS KNICKERS

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Poor little Maggie Teyte!

A nice, little, sweet little bit of a girl, as pretty as a picture with a lovely disposition, an inclination to be feminine and retiring; and she is being persecuted by a press agent!

Just as soon as I set eyes on Miss Teyte, I knew she wasn't the kind of girl that went galloping around the country wearing trousers, collecting crowds in the street, pulling rubber boots over her silk stockings and otherwise attracting attention to herself.

And yet that is just what she is said to be doing, all on account of a press agent.

Just as soon as little Miss Teyte has done something perfectly awful and is settling back, saying: "There, I hope I'll never have to do anything like that again!"—up comes the press agent wearing a diabolical grin and demanding some utterly preposterous accomplishment.

No Rest for the Weary.

When she gets out of his sight and reach, he sends telegrams stirring up editors and the poor little girl doesn't get a minute's peace.

Not that she is complaining. No, indeed. She thinks the press agent person is doing well for her. Other prima donnas are trying to hire him away from her, and she does her stunts like an infant taking medicine.

When I was ushered into her parlor at the Copley-Plaza yesterday afternoon, Miss Teyte was engaged in literary pursuits. She turned around in such a way that I couldn't help but see that she wore high boots. You could tell she was following instructions. The press agent had said: "Be sure you call attention to the boots, whatever else you do." So she did. At first I thought they were rubber, but then it was evident as more came into view that they were polished leather, and they ran away up to the knee.

Naturally we began by talking about boots.

"Why?" I demanded, pointing.

"Oh, yes. You see, I find it very difficult to endure the weather in this country. I cannot keep warm. So I have decided to wear high this Winter, they are so comfortable and warm."

"Wear them in the house, too?"

"Oh, yes. They are very comfortable. One doesn't have to wear slippers or—"

"Or stockings," I suggested.

"Or stockings—Yes, of course I wear stockings," replied Miss Teyte indignantly. "I didn't mean that at all."

"Do you wear them with your—ahem—pantaloons?"

"Oh, My Knickers!"

"Oh, my knickers! Of course. Do you know I am quite in love with my knickers. I wore them all around New York. I went out playing golf with them and didn't attract any attention."

"That was pretty tough," I said sympathetically.

"Not at all," replied the lady indignantly. "I didn't want to attract attention. I rode home in the subway from the golf links because the car broke down," (I'll bet the press agent had stolen a wheel or something). "Nobody noticed me at all."

"What did you have on?"

"Only a raincoat over my costume."

"Not having X-ray eyes, the people in the subway didn't know about your knickers?"

"Oh, one could tell I wasn't wearing skirts."

At this point I find that I have mislaid several pages of my shorthand notes so I can't reproduce the conversation further. But we talked about music and art, and progress, and Mary Garden, and Tango—Maggie is a fine tangoist, though she only took one lesson—and something was said about a person named Debussy, but I can't remember whether he had something to do with music or whether he is the tailor who make the knickers.

This afternoon in the Copley-Plaza ballroom Miss Teyte sings old French sings in costume. Later in the season she appears in our opera.

MISS ETHEL BLANCHARD, a Boston young woman, whom many regard as the typical American girl.

REAL AMERICAN GIRL MAKES A LIFE COMRADE

Ella Wheeler Wilcox in yesterday's AMERICAN quotes from a bachelor, who tells why he prefers Southern girls to those who live in the North.

He says:

"The New England girl is reared with the idea that vanity is sin and she is not accustomed to hear her personal charms mentioned in the family.

"The old Puritan fathers left their rigid ideas about the danger and wickedness of feminine vanity to their descendants."

The bachelor's ideas of the Southern girl are quite different.

"The Southern girl," he says, "is not afraid to show pleasure in the society of men, because she has grown up in the atmosphere of gallantry. She makes no better wife than her sisters of colder climes, but she makes a better comrade oftentimes for a season."

Take note of this "for a season." The typical American girl to be found in New England should have no "for a season" attached to her, and though less effusive, she should remain companionable through life. The photograph of the typical American girl, when it is finally selected, should show by features and carriage that constancy is one of her virtues. There will be no simpleton that her charms are of such a nature that they will fade with years. We make this statement inspired by a belief in the New England girl, aroused by the many pictures of her already sent in, which, though possibly not the prize winners, are nevertheless true types of New England girlhood, and well fitted to be representative of America.

Miss Ethel Blanchard, whose picture is given today, is a Boston girl.

The prize, which will be presented to the "Typical American Girl" when she is selected by the judges in this great contest will be a life-size oil portrait of herself, painted by a noted New England artist, from personal sittings.

544 MILLION EGGS STORED, SAYS CASSIDY

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

A housewife said to me today:

"Mr. Cassidy, I've been reading your articles in the AMERICAN on the egg gambling evil. It's easy enough to discover an evil, but it's a mighty hard thing to find a remedy for that evil."

There is a remedy. It is the passing of national legislation limiting the period for storage of food products. On November 1 there were reported in forty-four of the forty-six consolidated warehouses of the United States, 1,000,000 cases of cold storage eggs—that is, 144,000,000 units. It is a safe estimate, I think, to put the eggs in the two unreported coolers, making 50,000,000 more, or a total of 194,000,000 cold storage eggs.

But these do not include the eggs put away by the large packing houses. I secured a communication from an authority in which he says the Armours and Swifts have 350,000,000 eggs in their refrigerators, this round up of storage and packing stocks making a grand total of 544,000,000 eggs.

Most of these eggs are "put away" in March and April. My remedy would be a national act establishing a Federal supervision and limiting the storage period to three months. The effect of this would be that by the end of June all these eggs would have to be put out into the channels of consumption and the consumer would get them at reasonable prices.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is good enough for a grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the messy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular, because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

WARN EVERETT OF FIRE PERIL IN THE SCHOOLS

The special committee of Everett citizens appointed to investigate the school buildings of the city has reported, severely criticising fire-prevention facilities, the lack of adequate playgrounds and the general arrangement of the grades.

Assistant District Attorney Nelson P. Brown of Middlesex County is chairman of the commission. The other members are Richard E. Herson, J. Blanchard Bunn, Stephen J. Gilman and Henry J. Keaney. They were named by Mayor James Chambers. The report says in part:

"Many conditions would not be tolerated in mills and factories. With the exception of the Devens, Hancock and Whittinop schools, all of the wooden buildings as well as the Center and Adams of the brick buildings are constructed with but one exit corridor, a condition which tremendously increases the danger of injury in case of fire. Why only the chance of getting out through a single corridor, the fact that the city has not suffered serious loss of life by reason of this antique construction, may be charged to good fortune alone."

"There is not a single building in the entire city which has been provided with a playground.

"Cleared from the vacant lot to the street by the lot owner, and from the street to the vacant lot by the abutters and police, the youth of the city find themselves in a fine case avoiding the law in order to play. The game of circumventing the lot owners, the police and abutters is more exciting than the play itself."

Over 18,000 More in Russian Strike

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 20.—More than 18,000 men joined the general strike throughout Northern Russia today, bringing the total number of idle workers up to 83,529.

ONE REASON WHY

Well, I declare; twins!

No, not exactly. They look alike, though, don't they?

Ah, well, all babies look alike; you can't tell anything about them.

Maybe you can't but that old gentleman can.

He can, can he? Who might he be?

He happens to be A Fine Old Gentleman of the Old School.

Ah, indeed.

Yes, and he knows all about babies. They may look alike, weigh alike, nurse from the same fount and have the identical patch of fuzz on their little heads, yet this old gentleman can tell all about them for years to come. Not superficially, either, but fundamentally.

Really I thought only the Lord could do that!

Well, that makes two, then. The old gentleman is a little more sure of his facts, that is all. Listen; see that baby on the right?

Yes.

Well, the old gentleman knows that it is foreordained and predestined to be a satellite—you know, something that adores and basks and moves in respectful circles around a superior. It will never have any rights or wrongs of its own, or, if it has, it will never have intelligence enough to right them. But Nature wonderful in her works?

Yes, and what a wonderful old gentleman to know all about it! What does he say about the other baby?

Well, he says that one is predestined to be a natural luminary—a wonderful mind, capable of directing and guiding—just a natural instinct for it, he says. Even though the other baby will never have capacity for knowing rights and wrongs and abuses, yet this one will always have enough wisdom for them both. It's wonderful!

Even though it may turn out a great drunkard, or drug fiend, or pugnacity, or some kind of a loathsome rapscallion?

Yes, even then this wonderful faculty will always be his—ahem, yes, this is a boy baby!

Oh, then it is merely the difference between boys and girls?

Exactly.

You think that your mother or sister or wife could not vote with more honor and ability than any casual, bleat-eyed, rum-brained man?

I GET OFF HERE. GOODNIGHT!

Summer Capital Is Cornish Again

STATE BOARD PROBES STRIKE AT LAWRENCE

LAWRENCE, Nov. 21.—The State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation opened today in Lawrence an investigation of the strike of 350 stationary firemen who are asking an eight-hour day, with no reduction of wages. The strike threatens to bring out all employes of the mills here.

Firemen testifying at the hearing said they were obliged to work eighty-four hours a week, alternating with a seventy-two hour schedule.

The 350 firemen on strike gathered at headquarters and marched to City Hall where the hearing was held.

Strikers Heard First.

The hearing was opened by Willard Howland of the State Board with the announcement that the strikers would have the opportunity of presenting their side of the case first. Attorney John P. S. Mahoney called Patrick Bresnahan, a fireman at the Arlington Mills, as the first witness. This was the testimony:

Q.—Are you married? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where do you work? A.—In the Arlington cotton mill.

Q.—What do you do? A.—I am a fireman.

Q.—How long have you been there? A.—Three years.

Q.—What time do you go to work? A.—At six in the morning.

Q.—What time do you get through? A.—At six at night.

Q.—How many days a week do you work? A.—Seven days a week.

Q.—What pay do you receive? A.—Twenty-two cents an hour.

Gets Up at 5 O'Clock.

Q.—What time do you arise in the morning? A.—Five o'clock.

Q.—What time do you get home at night? A.—Six-thirty o'clock.

Q.—Do you work eighty-four hours a week? A.—Yes.

Q.—Seven days in the week? A.—Every other week.

Q.—How many hours do you work on alternate weeks? A.—Six days, seventy-two hours.

Q.—How many men work seven days a week? A.—They all take turns.

Deputy Chief George A. Luck of the Boiler Inspectors' Department was present at the hearing. The members of the State Board sitting are Willard Howland, Frank M. Bump and Charles G. Wood. A conference between the engineers, master mechanics and the striking firemen to arrange a new schedule of hours, to be presented to the board, took place today.

SEIZE ALLEGED YEGGMEN AFTER STORE 'BREAK'

Another trio of alleged yeggmen were rounded up today, following a burglary in the liquor store of Louis Mangini & Company at No. 85 Blackstone street, North End. In the home of one of the prisoners the police say they confiscated eight revolvers and an assortment of powder, drills, fuses and other safe-wrecking paraphernalia.

The prisoners, according to the police, admit three breaks, but before the investigation is concluded the police expect to implicate them in a dozen others. The trio gave their names as Joseph Zakowsky, seventeen, of No. 60 Nashua street; George Slevsky, eighteen, of No. 14 Wiget street and Andrew Penso, nineteen, of No. 3 Stillman place, North End.

Zakowsky was caught in the basement of Magini's liquor store. Two others, who were with Zakowsky, fled, leaving a quantity of stolen cigars, cigarettes and tobacco in a doorway on the opposite side of the street.

Zakowsky declared he did not know the two who were with him. When questioned as to how he supported himself, Zakowsky made an admission which led to the arrest of Slevsky, who was found in bed. A search of the house brought to light a bag filled with drills, powder, fuses and firecrackers and eight revolvers, several of which were fully loaded. Slevsky denied he was with Zakowsky in the liquor store, but admitted robbing the fruit store of Joseph Cavaguaro at No. 31 Dock square.

TAKE A GLASS OF SALTS TO FLUSH THE KIDNEYS IF YOUR BACK HURTS

Advises folks to overcome Kidney and Bladder trouble while it is only trouble.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

"Sleep!" said the old gentleman, "Joe's always asleep. Goes on errands fast asleep, and snores as he waits at table."

"How very odd!" said Mr. Pickwick.

"Ah! odd indeed," returned the old gentleman; "I'm proud of that boy—wouldn't part with him on any account—he's a natural curiosity. Here, Joe, Joe, take these things away, and open another bottle—d'ye hear?"

It was a bottle of wine the old gentleman called for. Ale was seldom bottled in the days when everybody loved a bitter hop ale. We do not bottle Pickwick Ale—nor do we allow others to bottle it. We want you to get all of its good flavor—that is why Pickwick is only sold on tap.

Mr. Pickwick.

Physician Gives Recipe For Gray Hair

A Well-Known Physician and Author Gives Simple Home Recipe That Will Darken Gray Hair.

Dr. Stanton Burroughs, the well-known physician and author, recently made the following statement: "Gray hair can be easily darkened by the following simple recipe, which you can mix at home: To 7 oz. of water add a small box of Barbo Compound, 1 oz. bay rum and ¼ oz. glycerine. Apply it to the hair every other day until the desired shade is obtained. It not only is an excellent hair darkener, but at the same time removes dandruff and other ills of the scalp. I use it myself and have no hesitancy in recommending it to my patients. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Adv.

Insane Hospital Trustees Start Inquiry in Annie Dunham Case.

WORCESTER, Nov. 20.—There was a clash between attorneys and the trustees at the insane hospital investigation in Worcester today over an attempt to inquire into the case of Annie E. Dunham, who, in sensational letters made public yesterday, charged that she was wrongfully detained in the Worcester State Hospital. The board voted after a private discussion to investigate the case.

Dr. Ray L. Whitney, first assistant in the hospital, was the principal witness today. Dr. L. Vernon Briggs asked him:

"What is Mrs. Dunham's ailment?"

Dr. Whitney shook his head, but added: "I have examined her."

Attorney P. H. Kelley asked why witness couldn't answer the question, but his interrogation was ruled out of order by Judge Mason, one of the trustees.

Gentleman Officer to Jail Miss Burns

Washington Police Promise to Be Nice When They Arrest Suffragist.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—"There is no reason why a policeman cannot be a gentleman. A gentlemanly policeman calling upon Miss Burns, the suffragist, to serve the warrant and not finding her in will call again, as a gentlemanly policeman ought to do," said Captain Hollinberger, scowling the bearing of the Washington police toward Miss Lucy Burns, suffragist, for whom they hold a warrant.

She is charged with marking up the pavements of the city as a means to advertise a suffragette mass meeting.

BRAVE WOMAN AND GIRL SAVED IN LYNN BLAZE

Mrs. Jennie Carmen and her daughter-in-law Anna Carmen were rescued while unconscious from a burning building at No. 136 Alley street, Lynn, today, after Mrs. Carmen had wakened the other inmates of the house and helped them to safety.

She is over sixty. Wakened by the smell of smoke she ran to the street, detected the fire, and ran back into the house. Eight people live in the four-story wooden tenement, and she roused them all and hurried them to the street.

The last person she awakened was her daughter-in-law Anna. The young woman fainted from smoke and from the fright. Mrs. Carmen dragged her to a window, screamed for help, and then fainted also. The firemen found the two women lying in a heap at the window and carried them down the ladder to the street.

Condemns Service on Pullman Trains

Commissioner Says Tipping System Milks the Public.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—"As the Pullman system is now operated, the man who rides in a Pullman car is unable to obtain any service unless he pays extra for it," was one of the findings of President John M. Eshleman, of the California Railroad Commission, which has been investigating the practices of the company in this State. He declares:

"We are convinced that much of the trouble of the Pullman Company is due to the fact that it does not pay sufficient wages to its employes and practically compels them to make a living by getting the travelling public to "dig up" or "come through," as the language of the day has it.

Love Romance of Harry and Evelyn

CHAPTER LXXVI.

"If there's a hole in a' your coats,
I rede ye tent it;
A chiel's amang ye takin' notes,
And, faith, he'll prent it."
—ROBERT BURNS.

With a day intervening before Harry Thaw should be called to the bar again, both prosecution and defence rested on their cars, preparatory to the actual clash.

But Justice Fitzgerald himself exercised his judicial authority to the extent of calling before him Police Inspector McCluskey, who was to have charge of the policing of the trial.

His Honor instructed the inspector not to admit to the courtroom the first day any except accredited newspaper representatives, and the 200 talesmen who had been subpoenaed and such relatives of the prisoner as were supplied with duly authorized passes.

Judge Fitzgerald knew there would be a mob to storm the court, if not checked at the start.

"Do not let any influence sway you, no matter what it may be," he charged the judge to the inspector. "Do not let a single soul into the courtroom except witnesses, reporters and others having passes."

This was a stiff assignment and McCluskey knew it, so he prepared accordingly. On Wednesday morning, January 22, he had under arms summoned at the Criminal Court building, the reserves from three precincts, hundreds of mounted patrolmen.

Storm Court Doors.

The public had been warned in the newspapers of the impossibility of getting into the courtroom, but there were fully 5,000 people jammed in the streets about the building by 9 o'clock. Then the police began to clear the streets and to tell everyone that there was no need of hanging around and being in the way. The police arguments—oral and forcible—were so effective that the crowd had dwindled by the time the trial began.

The judge's provision that newspaper workers should have admission was modified, but there were by actual reckoning, 288 foreign and American correspondents, as well as the dozens of New York reporters, determined to get seats in a courtroom which had a seating capacity of only 270.

When one considers that there were nearly 200 talesmen who had to find room, as well as counsel, court officers and the Thaw family, it will readily be seen that someone was to be disappointed.

The newspaper arrangements for the Thaw trial were nothing short of monumental. The press motto seemed to be: "Let no guilty man escape." The editorial instinct told the publishers that this trial was the one overwhelming piece of news that the public wanted. So the press prepared to give the public what it wanted—and lots of it.

Telegraph and cable wires had been installed in the Criminal Courts building. An improvised telegraph office was established on the ground floor of the building. A huge cable, filled with wires, was run over the roof, down through one of the fan lights and into the great room on the first floor. Next to it, for the use of the five London correspondents and the men representing Paris and Berlin papers.

Three London dailies sent a man each from their staffs across the water to cover the trial, so great was the interest in the fact of Yarmouth's untoward trial by marriage, so to speak. Two other London papers were content with the service of their New York correspondents.

There were thirty-two men and women writers from the New York evening papers alone, as well as the morning sheet battery. Arrangements were made to seat the evening paper people at two long tables in the centre of the court room. The morning paper camp was given accommodations at the north side of the room, in the space usually reserved for distinguished visitors. The out-of-town reporters scrambled for any seats they could find.

Added to the trying staff were scores, even hundreds, of messenger boys, telephone operators, sketch artists and photographers—the latter working as close to the inside of the building as the exasperated police would permit.

Shortly before 10 o'clock that morning two automobiles were driven to the courthouse with the members of the Thaw family. These included:

Mrs. William Thaw, Harry's mother.
Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.
Alice, Countess of Yarmouth, Harry's sister.
May McKenzie (with Evelyn).
Mrs. George L. Carnegie (Margaret Thaw).
Mr. Carnegie.
Edward Thaw, Harry's brother.

Alienists on Hand.

They were escorted to the courtroom via Judge Fitzgerald's lobby and were shown to chairs directly behind the space reserved for Harry and his counsel.

Already in the courtroom were the alienists summoned, District Attorney Jerome, Assistant District Attorney Garvan, one or two others from the prosecutor's office and a few newspaper men, though there was no prospect of the latter being called on for a while.

In the bar jurisdiction were three alienists, Dr. Austin G. Flint, Dr. Carlos M. MacDonald and Dr. William Mabon. They were for the State and had tried, but in vain, to make examination of Thaw the week of the shooting of Stanford White. Thaw would not talk with them at that time.

The alienists were there to support the contention of the State, if necessary, that Thaw was sane when he shot White. There was much speculation among the reporters and others as to just how big a factor the alienist was to become in Harry Thaw's life.

Meanwhile Harry Thaw himself was coming over from the Tombs. Deputy Sheriff Bell and Delehanty, who had been detailed to the duty of personal guards for the prisoner, had gone over to the Tombs in sufficient season. At Harry's cell they said: "Well, Thaw, we are ready."

"So am I," was Harry's answer. Then he came along with the deputies, across the melancholy Bridge of Sighs and down through the meaning gallery into the prison pen, to await the call from the court.

Harry's counsel had assembled.

They made imposing array. There was Delphin Michael Delmas, the Napoleon of the California bar, and Clifford W. Hartridge, A. Russell Peabody, John B. Gleason, Henry Merton and Daniel O'Reilly, the last-named having been the first lawyer to get to Thaw's side after the shooting.

Delmas was a person of particular interest because he had come into the case so recently and because he was scheduled to bear the brunt of the defence.

Then a court officer called the court quiet. There was the formal announcement: "Hear ye! Hear ye! The Supreme Court of Supreme Courts," and in came Mr. Justice John J. Fitzgerald, clad in his silken robes and carrying the official appreciation of judicial dignity and human understanding.

But the centre of the general gaze, the target for every reportorial, legal and official eye was Evelyn, seated in the Thaw family group.

(To Be Continued).

Harvard Is 10-7 Favorite in Gotham

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Late betting on the curb and at Schuma's finds Harvard 10-to-7 favorite. The backers of the Blue are seeking 10 to 6.

Even money that Harvard gets at least seven points was one wager of a favorite nature. One thousand dollars was laid on this. That other side would get a touchdown carried a $500 bet. Some other wagers were $200 even that the total score will be odd; $200 at 10 to 9 that Yale will not make a touchdown. Offers were $500 even that if Harvard doubles Yale's score, and the same amount that Harvard gets the first field goal.

MORRIS' BOUT WITH WILLARD IS UP IN AIR

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Carl Morris' proposed ten-round bout with Jess Willard in the Garden on December 2 still hangs fire for the reason that Manager Gibson has been unable to patch up matters with a Buffalo promoter whose protest resulted in Willard's indefinite suspension last January at the hands of the State Athletic Commission.

Willard, it will be recalled, failed to keep an engagement to box One Round Davis in Buffalo, giving as a reason that he had injured his hand. When he was suspended he was notified that he would remain ineligible until he had gone through with the Davis match. Davis at present is physically unable to take part in a ring contest, but the commission holds that Willard must meet some other opponent unless the Buffalo promoter will waive claim to the Texan's services.

Gibson has tried vainly to reach an agreement with the Buffalo promoter. He has pointed out that the Buffalo club put on Leach Cross with Jimmy Duffy some time ago when Cross was under contract to box at the Garden, yet there was no protest from the local club. If the Buffalo promoter will fix the amount of damages at a fair figure Gibson will reimburse him, but so far the rival managers are unable to get together.

Morris prefers Willard to Rodel in spite of the latter's good showing against Willard in Milwaukee Monday night. Morris says that Willard was clearly out of condition. As for Gunboat Smith, who is claiming the world's title since he got a decision over Langford in Boston, Morris declares that he will camp on Smith's trail until he forces him into another fight.

Rutt Out of Big New York Grind

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Walter Rutt, the star German bicycle rider, who was to have ridden in a special match race against Frank Kramer prior to the six-day race inwhich the Teuton was to have a mount also, suffered a relapse from a bout he had recently in Paris and will not be able to come to New York. Instead of the two-man sprint race a three-cornered event is now being arranged for December 8 at the Garden.

Andre Fverbaar, the French speeder, is one of the men who will be in the race with Kramer. Jackie Clarke of Australia will probably be the third entry. Should the Antipodean be on the starting line the match for the world title will have an international flavor. eFrchicot will sail for New York next Saturday on the Lorraine of the French line.

There is a possibility that Verri, the Italian champion, may be added to the match race. Verri is on his way here now aboard the steamer France, accompanied by Maurice Brocco.

Federals Plan to Invade Cleveland

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 20.—A downtown park, within five minutes' walk of the centre of the city, is the prospect for which the Federal Baseball League is negotiating here. C. X. Zimmerman, of the local club, said today that his organization is trying to lease from the city made land on the lake front at the foot of East Ninth street. If an agreement cannot be reached two other properties are under consideration.

Last year the Federal Park was in the outskirts of the city.

Williams Commences Basketball Work

WILLIAMSTOWN, Nov. 20.—Williams' basketball practice has started under the direction of Captain Hodge. A squad of thirty candidates reported. Other players with varsity experience available are Hay, Lefferts, Dempsey and Dooley. The chief problem is to develop a man for centre to take the place of Victor, the New York city boy, who was graduated last Spring after representing the Purple for three years. The annual class series will be completed before Christmas.

Bob McAllister in New York Battle

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Bob McAllister, the California middleweight, may furnish sporting men with a surprise when he hooks up with Young Mike Donovan at the Fairmont A. C. next Wednesday night. McAllister, judging from his work in training at Hawkins' place, is a real fighter. He is remarkably clever at boxing and is a terrific puncher. Jim Flynn seems to think that he is a coming champion.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

A FEW baseball critics are saying it doesn't pay to change managers of baseball teams often. They point to the record of such leaders as Connie Mack and John McGraw to uphold their contention.

No club owner would change managers if he had such a manager as McGraw or Mack on his payroll. There may be other managers just as good, but none has had the success of these two celebrated leaders of big league teams, except possibly Fred Clarke of Pittsburgh.

Napoleon Bonaparte (not Lajoie) said he couldn't afford to have unlucky generals, no matter how brilliant they were. It is the same way with club owners. They cannot afford to have losing managers on their staff. If a manager cannot win with a team he had to go, although the fault may not always be the manager's.

BUT in the long run the good managers will get the good teams. It takes time and owners are sometimes impatient. The public is partly to blame. The fans of every city want a winning team. If the team doesn't win they will not attend the games. The club owner is constantly looking for new material. He employs scouts to scour the country and spends large sums of money for players. He does all he can do, and it is then up to the manager to produce a winning combination.

THE principal trouble that unsuccessful managers encounter, or rather the chiefest fault of the unsuccessful manager, is the fact that he doesn't know how to organize a ball club. Many of them have not the proper authority to organize a ball club even if they knew how to do so.

As an example of a great organizer, the writer would mention George Stallings, of the Boston Nationals. In the first place, Stallings has absolute authority to make all the deals and swaps of players that he likes. If he decides to buy a player, he simply notifies the owner of the club and the transaction takes place. If he desires to swap Smith, Brown and Jones of his club for Green and Gray, of another club, he tells the owner of the club of the deal and the proper papers are passed. Not many managers have the authority that Stallings has. And if they had it, many of them would not know how to use it.

A MANAGER may realize that he needs an extra catcher, and he tells the owner of the club about it, perhaps suggesting a player or two that might be had. The owner starts negotiations and may or may not land one of the two men. With Stallings he knows the man he wants, and, furthermore, he knows whether he can get him or not. He does his own negotiating, and when the deal is completed an announcement of the fact is made to the public.

ON the other hand, take the case of Manager Evers of the Chicago Nationals. He probably knows more about baseball than Charlie Murphy, owner of the club, can ever expect to know. Yet Murphy will not give Evers authority to make trades for players. Murphy has to be consulted even before negotiations can begin, and it is Murphy who conducts the negotiations, not Evers. In the case of Evers, Comiskey and Charlie Mack, they do their own business the same as Stallings does. It is the only proper way. BUT first you must find a manager clever enough to make his own trades. There are only a few of them left.

CONNIE MACK himself says that no manager can do himself justice or the club owner justice or the public justice unless he has absolute authority—and time. But first the manager must demonstrate that he is entitled to absolute authority. There is a club owner in the big leagues—unless it be Murphy, or Ebbets, or Mrs. Britton—that would be tickled to death to be able to find a manager to whom he could turn over all the turmoil and the bother and irksome detail of hiring and firing and digging up ball players. All of them, with possibly the exceptions named, would be well content to simply put the signature to any papers the manager presented to him. But how many managers are there that can be given absolute authority?

Answer—mighty few.

Yost Displeased at Election of Captain

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 20.—"I would rather have lost the Pennsylvania game than have Raynsford elected captain of the football team," was the statement Coach Yost of the Michigan eleven made when he was informed of the surprising selection the team made in its leader for next year.

It is understood Yost favored the election of Tommy Hughitt, the star quarter, who was looked upon by the whole university as a sure choice. Raynsford was a sub until the Penn game.

The meeting usually is held in February for the purpose of passing on the league's playing schedule, but will be postponed owing to the absence of President Comiskey of the Chicago club and McAleer, who will be due in New York March 6.

Packey and Britton Sign Up for Bout

Packey McFarland and Jack Britton have agreed upon December 8 for their much talked of battle in Milwaukee. The weight is 135 pounds at 3 o'clock, which would seem to indicate that McFarland isn't so heavy as some persons have insisted. Packey will receive 35 per cent. of the gate, while Britton will take 25 per cent. The promoters figure on a $15,000 house.

Hulswitt May Lead Skeeters Next Year

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Rudy Hulswitt is today being talked of as the next manager of the Jersey City team of the International League. Hulswitt, who formerly played the infield for the Cincinnati Nationals and other big league clubs, has been purchased from the Louisville club and it is said that he will pilot the Skeeters when the next season opens.

Malden Boys Protest Somerville Victory

The Malden-Medford High football game, which is the big contest of the year on the schedules of both schools, will not be played on Thanksgiving day, according to the Malden players, unless Teacher-Manager Thornton Jenkins protests the Somerville game of last Saturday. They claim they should have won by the score of 16 to 14. William and John Devlin are leaders in the protest. Jenkins says he will not enter a protest, but will sever his athletic connections if the school wishes him to do so.

Taft Lauds Golf; Speaks of Benefits

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 20.—Professor William Howard Taft of Yale in discussing the benefits of golf said that golf was one of the greatest movements that have come to man. He added:

"I hope to see the time not far distant when public golf courses will be offered to the public as in Scotland for those who cannot pay for costly club privileges. I would have the funds raised by taxation.

"Golf is preeminently a game for the people and they should be allowed to play it. Properly played it brings a self-restraint that not even the churches can exert. The presence of a golf club in a community is not like the saloon, not like a lunatic asylum, and not like some churches, in that it exerts a beneficial influence. It always helps the surroundings, increasing the valuation of property."

YALE'S FOOTBALL SQUAD OF THIRTY-THREE MEN COMING HERE [illegible] THIS AFTERNOON

YALE WARRIORS DUE HERE LATE THIS AFTERNOON

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 20.—The Yale varsity football squad will leave for Auburndale, Mass., at 1 o'clock where the team will await the arrival of the visiting Harvard team in charge of Stadium on Saturday. The men are due to arrive in the Boston suburb late this afternoon. The Eli warriors will make their quarters at the Woodland Park Hotel. Their baggage will be awaiting them on their arrival.

Exactly thirty three players will be taken as follows:

Another squad of reserves will have to be Saturday morning. It was announced that the following players would not make the first or further trips. They will be taken: Maddux, Oakes, Roberts, Robinson and Coates.

Dunn and Manning, both Fine Arts men, that still exhibit [illegible] and Manning not be played, Ross [illegible] guard last year, will get the place but this chance is possible rather than probable.

Braun may get into the Harvard game because of his proficiency in catching forward passes. Otherwise it was announced that the Yale team would be the same as started the Princeton game.

The undefeated Eli will be played a rousing send off Friday afternoon and there will be a [illegible] at the depot before the men depart, during which the songs and cheers to be used Saturday at the game will be rehearsed.

New Inventions for Army Eleven

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Some of the Army regulars were [illegible] today, but the rest of the squad [illegible] of the most strenuous workouts of the year when Head Coach Biddle [illegible] rough a long session. He was not only requiring behind the line [illegible] still in the best of [illegible].

Huston, in rags, [illegible] in a signal rally while Coaches Bevers and Graves assisted by Chas. Pass of Harvard [illegible] drove his fellow huskies in the Army's forward wall at top speed. Huston seems [illegible] to the squad and [illegible] try his improvement being slow.

Cornell Rounding Into Fine Shape

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 20. The slippery condition of the varsity football field compelled the Cornell squad to [illegible] over to the freshman gridiron for an hour this afternoon. The 82 men using every Penney vanish for fear of which the coaches have [illegible] injuries [illegible].

The varsity withstood this attack for more than an hour, and then [illegible] was unable to make any material headway. On the other hand, the freshmen opened up a number of times for long gains. Phillips and Colt, freshman halfbacks, showing up particularly well.

Harvard Squad Holds Last Practice Today

After Light Drill, the Men Will Go to a Lowell Suburb to Rest Up for Battle

By SYDE LYNES.

"Ah, who can tell how hard it is to climb
The steep where fame's proud temple shines afar"

If you want to study at close quarters the Harvard team as they would appear on the field of battle, with the [illegible] of work in preparation for the Stadium struggle with Yale on Saturday next, then you should have been present at the Soldiers Field practice this afternoon. When the last of the Crimson team left the Stadium until Saturday next, when they will [illegible] in Boston, and will be [illegible] to the fray.

Even as early as yesterday afternoon, when the Harvard squad [illegible] the field, one could see that the [illegible] were in the pink of condition. [illegible] Coach Haughton [illegible] the men [illegible] to make them [illegible] in the [illegible] of weeks. Tuesday [illegible] said that

"These are the time that try men's souls."

Whether or not he referred to the [illegible] he is [illegible] of the [illegible] is apropos of this period of the football season.

Bob Weeks said it is one of the [illegible] to break loose with [illegible] and [illegible] Mahon and Nichols [illegible] the eleven, with every man [illegible] the scrimmage, and then when the [illegible] more than [illegible] the field to the battle axes of a big [illegible] fighting out Harvard's last stages, the team will give an exception drill up and down the field and then be gone.

Every man on the squad now is in the finest kind of shape with the possible exception of Hitchcock and Brickley. The former is still being troubled with a [illegible], which has been bothering him [illegible] all year. It [illegible] Brickley wanted to [illegible] but he was given a [illegible] today to have [illegible] to come [illegible] as was also Brickley, who is still a [illegible] sore. Both men will be in [illegible] Saturday's game and give [illegible] of their prowess.

Team Has Been Coming Fast.

The team has been coming along fast [illegible] and we say the spirit of the men and the speed and accuracy [illegible] on the in rease and while

On their own merits modest men are [illegible]

The Harvard eleven is looking pretty good, but [illegible] football fans [illegible] not only their faith in the [illegible] machine

In the old days of Walt Camp, Hamilton Fish, Fairman Dibblee, Lamson, Jr., and [illegible] Farnham, to make them there in the public eye, to make the most of wanting or unwillingly may prevent [illegible] station of media drill that is [illegible] would [illegible]

His stunt is to place the ball on any [illegible] line of the [illegible] and, [illegible] on down and eight yards to [illegible] have the quarter punt [illegible] the other side. The kicker [illegible] kept up with the ball on different [illegible] and with different downs and distances to gain, and [illegible] quarter execute [illegible] punts [illegible] situation well in hand.

Drill Has Desired Effect.

Then Coach Haughton usually proceeds to work the ball down near Harvard's goal, and playing the game of enemy all by himself, apparently well able to play the part of eleven men, he lets the ball fall on the [illegible] and after it kicks a goal, back to the [illegible] of the Crimson forwards [illegible] a scrimmage.

This style of drill has the desired effect of making every man [illegible] the right thing under every [illegible] condition, and reduces to the [illegible] the possibility of mistakes [illegible] player. Poor judgment by the quarterback should be a thing of the dark ages in the case of Harvard, at least this year.

Tiller Dibblee, famous backfield man and captain of the 1896 eleven at Harvard on which Head Coach Haughton played and which defeated Yale for the first time at New Haven, was on the field watching the work along with "Mike" McKay, Harvard's all American tackle several years ago. Both seemed mighty well pleased with the appearance of the team and both, let us say, have good long distances to see Harvard—well, I hope the Crimson is going to put that dear old bogey, Tradition, to rout.

TOM LYNCH MAY BE NAMED TO HEAD OUTLAWS

By FRANK G. MENKE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The National League magnates, who lately are [illegible] that [illegible] election on the firing of President Heydler, one of Pennsylvania's [illegible] their organization is [illegible] and discover that the firing of Tom Lynch, to make room for Tener will [illegible] a boomerang. The one thing [illegible] Curtis Lovell L. [illegible] needed to give strength and weight to their [illegible] and Lynch was a man of Lynch's [illegible] and reputation.

Lynch is the one baseball man per[illegible] who knows [illegible] baseball and the [illegible] in America today. And what [illegible] knows of the inner workings of the [illegible] baseball would [illegible] of the [illegible] and to the [illegible].

Lynch [illegible] to be [illegible] up by the Feds, only a [illegible] just now, as he will sign at the [illegible] they are [illegible] he is [illegible] a [illegible] contract at $8,000 a year the same salary he was paid by the National League.

Lynch Good Baseball Man.

When Lynch's term expires he will be [illegible] some. Because Lynch has devoted almost his entire life to baseball he has no time to [illegible] any other profession. And it seems a certainty that no one outside the Federal League could [illegible] actually offer Lynch $8,000 a year for [illegible] season.

Some there are who argue that Lynch would accept the [illegible] Federals' [illegible] One [illegible] of sentiment for the old Null and League crowd and [illegible] that he has been in organized baseball so long that he would not care to become an outlaw. The sentiment talk sounds like bunk. The argument that Lynch would rather be a "regular" [illegible] than become an outlaw with a [illegible] of $8,000 a [illegible] is [illegible] bunkum. And there's always a chance that the outlaws may become so strong that some day they will be taken into the organized crowd in the same way as was the American League.

Those who have followed Lynch a career in the head of the National League felt that his treatment at the hands of some of the magnates has not been the kind that would guarantee any real [illegible] Lynch. A certain set of National League moguls have [illegible] turn[illegible] ever since Lynch landed the job of [illegible] him and making his duties much harder than they ordinarily would be.

Of course, it isn't an absolute certainty that Lynch will accept the federals' offer. But it seems like a safe bet that he'll take the [illegible] the Federals can positively guarantee him his $8,000 salary.

Would Aid the Outlaws.

With Lynch at the head of their organization the Federals would be forty per cent stronger than they are now. Knowing that an experienced baseball man was the leader of the league, many [illegible] players now in the organized would not hesitate very long before jumping their organized contracts and signing up with the Federals whenever the Federals offered substantial increases.

The baseball public would give more consideration and more patronage to the Federal League with Lynch at the helm than it would otherwise, because they would know that Lynch would give them a fair and square deal.

Just where the National League is going to benefit by the acquisition of Governor Tener is a question. Tener has been out of touch with baseball for a long time, and he will have to be schooled in the present intricacies of the running of the game before he can be of any great value to the league. Of course, the fact that the former chief executive of one of the greatest states in the union is selling a baseball organization would be something of an advertisement to the game, but organized baseball does not need any press agenting.

As things look just now, it strikes us that the National League is [illegible] Lynch and hiring Tener is [illegible] its executive expense and getting the Federals that one mighty club it needed.

Jack Lester Will Clash with Coffey

NEW YORK, Nov. 20. Jack Lester, the Oregon heavyweight, will make his first appearance here at the Fairmount A. C. a week from next Wednesday night. He will [illegible] against Jim Coffey, the Dublin giant.

Coach Haughton Predicts Victory for the Crimson

Coach Percy A. Haughton of the Harvard football team [illegible] cheers [illegible] students when the predicted victory for the Crimson over Yale [illegible], at an [illegible] last night [illegible] in the Harvard Union. He said:

"This year the Harvard team has an opportunity to do what no other team has ever done—to beat Yale two years in succession, and to beat Yale in the Stadium. And this unparalleled feat is going to be accomplished on Saturday."

Heavy Navy Team in Fast Workout

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 20.—Post-[illegible] continued during the practice of the Naval Academy team today. TODAY'S INSTALMENT

THE policeman helped him as to local information, and he wrote the following:

"Leaving Scarsdale at 2:30 p. m. Passing through Malton at 4 o'clock, and reach York 5:10. Dr. Scarth permits journey, and accompanies me. Send any further messages care of respective station masters prior to hours named. Accept statement implicitly that I will reach London tonight. Will wire you from York certain; earlier if necessary. As for identity, you will recall May 15, Hyde Park, near Stanhope Gate, 4 o'clock."

Evelyn and he alone knew that at that spot on the day and hour named, they became engaged.

The policeman valiantly lent the few shillings necessary, and the sturdy horse from the Fox and Hounds tore back to Scarsdale.

But the constable was of additional value. His researches in Scarsdale provided a fairly accurate history and description of the two denizens of the Grange House.

Philip himself had, of course, seen "Dr. Williams" in broad daylight and undisguised—but yet could no remember where he heard that smooth-tongued voice. Jocky Mason, he only glimpsed hastily after the lapse of years, but the policeman's details of his personal appearance coincided exactly exactly with Philip's recollection, allowing for age and the hardships of convict life.

At last came the doctor, with a value.

"I am sorry," he imagined, "but all the money I can muster at such short notice is twelve pounds."

"I began life once before with three half-pence," was the cheery reply.

The few inhabitants of the hamlet gathered to see them off, and the fisherman's wife was moved to screw her apron into her eyes when Philip shook hands with her, saying that she would see him again in a few days.

"Eh, but he's a bonny lad," was her verdict.

"'Twas a fair sham' to treat him soo."

At Scarsdale and at Malton again came loving words from Evelyn. Now she knew who it was who telegraphed to her.

And the mysterious Philip Anson at York remained dumb.

"The wretch!" she said to her mother. "To dare to open my letter and send me impudent replies.

More than once she thought of going to York to meet her lover, but she wisely decided against this course. Mr. Abingdon was out of town, and Philip might need some one he could trust to obey his instructions in London.

At ten minutes past five Anson and Dr. Scarth arrived in York.

A long discourse in the train gave them a plan. They would not appeal at once to the police. Better clear the mist that hid events before the aid of the law was invoked. There were two of them. and the assistance of the hotel people could be obtained if necessary.

They hurried first to the station master's office. Anything for Anson. Yes. Only a few words of entreaty from Evelyn to avoid further risk.

Then to the hotel. They sought the manager.

"Is there a man staying here who represents that his name is Philip Anson?"

The question was unusual in its form. disturbing in its innuendo. The man who asked it was pale, with unnaturally brilliant brown eyes, a gentleman in manner, but attired in ill-fitting garments, and beneath his tweed cap he wore a surgical bandage.

And Philip Anson, the millionaire, of whom he spoke thus contemptuously, was staying in the hotel, and paying for its best rooms.

But the manager was perfectly civil. The presence of Dr. Scarth, a reputable-looking stranger, gave evidence that something important was afoot. Mr. Anson was in his rooms at the moment. Their names would be sent up.

Dr. Scarth, quick to appreciate the difficulties of the situation, intervened quietly.

"Is he alone?"

"Yes."

"Then it will be better if you accompany us in person. An unpleasant matter can be arranged without undue publicity."

This was alarming. The manager went with them instantly. They paused at the door indicated.

"Come with me," said Philip, turning the handle without knocking.

Grenier, intent on the perusal of a letter he had just written, looked up quickly.

He was face to face with Philip Anson.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Hinted at It

"Doctor, how can I prevent my husband from talking in his sleep?"

"Well, you might try giving him an opportunity in the daytime."

The Well-Dressed Girl

—Something New in Velvet—

BY FANNIE WARD

FOR FORMAL WEAR.

By Fannie Ward

(Star of "Madam President.")

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

"SOME in rags and some in tags and some in velvet gowns," says the old song. But I think we of today might modify that to "All in velvet gowns."

Velvet is the craze of the Winter. For the street, for the boudoir, for the theatre, for the ball and even for the bride, velvet reigns supreme in the mode of the Winter as the favored material.

A recent bride had her evening coat, her traveling suit, her most wonderful tea gown and even her bridal gown of velvet.

Rich in color and shading, soft and clinging in line, flattering to face and figure alike is velvet. Then, mildady, why not wear it?

In combination with fur or chiffon, with silk or lace, with net or cloth of silver and gold, velvet is rich and truly elegant. It sets as background and foundation, as trimming and as gown itself with truly regal beauty.

IF SHE WAS A GIRL

If I were a girl of limited income and wished to look as well as my richer sisters, I would try to manage a velvet suit with a fairly long coat. Then I should have a simple evening gown cut off the same piece of goods. Behold then I possess a distinctive suit for the street and a stunning evening gown with coat to match. I should have two blouses for my suit—a fancy white one to make me dainty at tiffentre, and one of chiffon to match my suit and trimmed with a bit of my suit material. So now I have also a calling gown, a dress for informal parties, and I am ready for every occasion if my wardrobe includes a simple suit for all the ordinary occasions of life.

To prove my sincerity and to add to my praise of velvet, I am showing you today one of my own velvet gowns. One is a simple little street gown and one is a dress for more formal occasions. It may be used for simple dinners, theatre and for all evening parties where strictly full dress is not required.

The little street frock may be made of silk velvet, of chiffon or of simple velveteen as your purse dictates. The blouse is of the high-waisted variety. It is cut "V" at the throat, and has a little collar such as we daughters of Eve all know how to fashion from a bit of Val. and some soft lawn. The jabot is in truth a wee four-in-hand tie of the lace. This bit of daintiness is particularly becoming and fetching against the rich velvet background.

THE SLEEVES

The sleeves are cut kimono fashion and fit quite close to the arm. The cuffs are soft wide bands of black satin like that watch folds about the waist in a narrow belt with one end falling just to the right of the centre. At the bottom of this end and at the centre waist in front a fashion is found velvet embroidered in soft tinted roses. Do this bit of needle work on the rich black velvet, it will please you to see the roses forming under your fingers in stray minutes each edge with a wee frill of lace. The fichu should be about one yard and a quarter long by eight or nine inches wide.

The only other ornamentation on the gown is the half yard girdle of embossed velvet or Oriental silk. It must be from three to three and a half yards long and finished in heavy silk tassels to match the velvet of your gown. Hem it carefully and fashion it yourself, for this will be a great saving of expense and will bring the beautiful velvet from which I want you to make your gown within your means.

THE BLOUSE

The blouse is a full kimono with extremely long shoulder seams. The skirt and it will add a wonderful touch to your gown.

The straight road skirt has a tunic that falls below the hip on the right and shortens in a gradual slope until it is eight inches shorter at the left. Black satin bitos trim straight down the front from throat to hem, and flush the longer side of the tunic.

The little dentre gown is of chiffon velvet in one of the wonderful new shades. Corbin blue, vieux rose or saffron yellow are the for the girl who owns several such gowns. But to the girl who owns only on such dress I recommend taupe or the wonderful new brown in the dark shade known as "Tete de Negre."

The wide set sleeves may be made by any clever fingers—put a strip of dainty embroidery down the centre and finish

drapes high in front to show a V-shaped slit and drapes low in back to form a round train.

Simplicity is not the keynote of the Winter. As a general thing it takes an expensive modiste to achieve the marvelous creations of the season 1913-1914, but with velvet for your material the most wonderful beauties of fashion are yours, even if you are your own dressmaker. Velvet is rich, supple, drapes well and LOOKS expensive—but velvet trims and makes itself with the merest bit of assistance—so we all doff our "rags and tags" and don velvet gowns. Result? We all look like the "Parisienne elegante" and we cost ourselves very inelegant small prices.

Up-to-the Minute Jokes

A traveling salesman died suddenly and was taken to his home. His relatives telphoned to the nearest florist, some miles distant, to make a wreath. The ribbon should be extra wide, with the inscription "Rest in Peace" on both sides, as if there was room, "We shall meet in Heaven."

* * *

The florist was busy and his new assistant handled the job. It was a startling floral piece which turned up at the funeral. The ribbon was extra wide and bore the inscription: "Rest in peace on both sides, and if there is room we shall meet in heaven."

"It's a great pity," said the convicted burglar to his counsel, "that you couldn't have made that closing speech of yours at the opening of the case."

"I don't see how that would have improved matters," said the advocate.

"It would, though," explained his client. "Then the jury would have been asleep when the evidence came on and I'd have stood some chance."

* * *

A teacher in a certain town (we confidentially decline to be more specific) had a great deal of trouble to make a boy in his class understand a point in his lesson. Finally, however, he succeeded, and, drawing a long breath, remarked:

"If it wasn't for me you would be the greatest donkey in this town."

* * *

Visitor (inquiring about with evident appreciation): "Really, this is splendid fruit. They say it is both meat and drink."

Workman (interruptingly): "Shure, an' it's right ye are, sor; an' if ye take plenty av it it'll foind ye lodgings, too."

The new baby had proved itself the possessor of extraordinary lung powers. One day baby's brother, Little Johnny, said to his mother:

"Ma, little brother came from heaven, didn't he?"

"Yes, dear," answered the mother.

Johnny was silent for a minute, and then went on:

"I say, ma."

"What is it," Johnny?"

"I don't blame the angels for slinging him out, do you?"

They had scrambled through the first dance on the program and he was leading her back to a seat.

"I could die dancing, couldn't you?" he asked.

"No," she replied. "There are pleasanter ways than being trampled to death."

THE FAMILY CUPBOARD

A Thrilling Story of High Society Life in New York

Adapted from Owen Davis's Dramatic Success

(Novelized by)

Alan Hathaway

(From Owen Davis' play now being presented in New York by William A. Brady —Copyright, 1913, by International News Service).

TOM led Alice away—a puzzled, frightened, wondering Alice. The boy stood looking at his father with still dislike. Charlie Nelson had controlled the quick tremor of surprise that had shaken him at sight of the woman to whom his son was trying to introduce his daughter. In a stern, controlled fury he turned on Kenneth.

"How dare you introduce your sister to a woman like this?"

"What right have you to insult this lady?" asked Kenneth, starting toward her.

Kitty had risen—the smile on her lips was steely now—her eyes had turned from gentian blue to the gray of a tempestuous storm. She was ready for her victory. She spoke softly—in a still voice that held both men.

"He has the best right in the world! The very, very best!"

Slowly, slowly she spoke her words—distilling them like liquid poison. Slowly, slowly she would take her moments of revenge—prolonging them to atone for her moments of weakness—the moment when she had been so near relenting. But now she was ready to demand her pay.

Nelson fanned her fury from smoldering little flames to walls of fire, for he ignored her with the stony oblivion of indifference.

"I must have a talk with you, Kenneth. Will you come to me tonight?"

The boy reflected that he had got on without his precious family for a whole month. He had been left to his own devices—and now, tonight—they all want-ed to talk to him!

"No! Not tonight! Now! If you talk to me at all it must be here, before the lady who is to be my wife."

He went toward Kitty protectingly, as if to take her in his arms, and so defy the world, if that need be.

"Your wife!" Nelson just breathed the words.

There was no sound. Ken stood as if frozen to cold sculpture in the movement he had started to make. Kitty stood still, too—waiting—waiting. Between the boy and the woman stood Kenneth's father.

There was a horrible pause—a pause fraught with all the shame and horror of sin and retribution.

Then Charles Nelson turned to Kitty and spoke hoarsely.

"YOU SAID YOU'D 'GET ME,' AND I THINK YOU HAVE."

"You know her?" asked Kenneth in slow wonder.

"Does he know me?"

Kitty faced father and son. But it was at the older man she looked with implacable hatred—with unswerving purpose in her eyes. And always on her lips that little smile—that was half sneer, half cruel mirth. Lucrezia Borgia wore a smile like that when life had brought her all her bitter lesson of poison lore.

Frail, dainty little Kitty May! Smiling like Mona Lisa, or the Sphinx, smiling with poison distilling in the barbed arrow of her words, she stood and juggled with happiness and life.

"Do you know why that man would rather see you dead than married to me? Because he knows just what I am. DO YOU KNOW NOW, HE KNOWS? DO YOU? BECAUSE HERE THE MAN WHO MADE ME THE THING HE SNEERS AT NOW."

Silence again! Silence—and heart beats of agony for boy and man! For Kitty Claire the ashes of her triumph to choke her parched throat. And if "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned," so it has no fires to scorch with the agony of souls from a flames she kindles for revenge—the flames that lick black with burning tongues—to burn their victims. Kitty May's moment had come—and it was a moment of torture for her.

In exquisite agony the boy spoke to the man and woman who had defrauded him of light and joy.

"You?" his burning eyes blazed on his father.

"YOU?" and a haggard face turned to the Delilah who had shorn him of strength.

Vindictive triumph blurred the beauty from Kitty's face.

"Yes—YES?"

She spoke slowly. The words sounded like some grim pendulum ticking out a sentence on the clock of doom.

"Kenneth Nelson raised his arm and struck his father a hard blow across the face with his open hand!

Kitty winced and cowered back crouching as if she had felt the brute force of that blow.

There was the stillness of death in the room.

It was as if a wild tornado had swept by—devastating everything — leaving emptiness, void, desolation and destruction in its wake. And a tornado of human passion—the most devastating force in life—had passed over the room.

Unshaken, Charles Nelson stood there. The blow fell—a crimson welt marked his cheek—a look of age swept its gray mask over his features. He did not move. He stood staring at the stark fury in Kenneth's eyes. Still unshaken, outwardly unmoved, he stood face to face with the man who was his son. No man could be unstirred. His nerves must have winced—his blood must have pounded in agony at the impact of his son's hand on his flesh, but he stood still. There was some of the martyred dignity of the prophets of old in his firm pose. He appeared as granite fast locked in the soil.

He looked at Kenneth a moment. The boy stared back—murderous hatred in his eyes.

A minute ticked by in muffled heart beats.

Slowly before his father's unwavering gaze, the anger died from Kenneth's eyes. Shame was there. Then came absolute horror of what he had done—a gleam of understanding of what this other man had suffered through love. A film came over his eyes. He turned his eyes from his father's face to his own right hand. He saw guilt—almost blood-guiltiness there.

Suddenly covering his tortured young face with shaken arms, Kenneth Nelson fell on his knees at his father's feet.

In the absolute stillness of the room, the boy's muffled sobs sounded loud to the point of agony.

Anger died—and horror and shame were born.

The boy's reason shook to its foundation. But there would be another test for Kenneth Nelson's strength to bear. There was still more bitter fruit for him to pluck from the Tree of Life.

"My Father! MY FATHER!"

The words were wrenched from his lips. His whole being was in storm-revolt. And the blood of his father throbbed and pulsed in his molten veins.

It was now to man now—and Kitty was forgotten.

But Kitty meant to speak for herself. She had prepared this scene, though its tragedy had gone far beyond the depths of her shallow mind. But this was her moment—her hour—her revenge.

BUSINESS AND FINANCIAL NEWS

EDITED BY EXPERTS

Latest in Today's Stock Markets

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were lower with a few exceptions this afternoon and the declines were generally fractional. Markets were weaker than at the opening, but the movement was not severe. Bonds and the industrials of any change in the situation. In Boston New Haven was off ¾, and "rights" were seven cents lower. Issues which had declined fractionally included American Sugar, Amalgamated Copper, Steel, Atchison, Reading, Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Rock Island, Northern Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Southern Railway, Kansas & Texas, Pennsylvania, Erie, Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Lehigh Valley, Wabash, Pittsburgh, Colorado & Southern, Delaware & Hudson, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, Norfolk & Western, Virginia Carolina Chemical, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Central Leather, Consolidated Gas, Smelting, American Car & Foundry, Steel Foundry, Locomotive, Westinghouse, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Interborough Rapid Transit, Metropolitan Street Railway, Amalgamated Copper, Anaconda, Utah Copper, Great Northern Ore, Iron Ore, Mexican Petroleum, Texas Company, Tennessee Copper, Granby, American Agricultural Chemical, Mohawk, Pond Creek and Alaska Gold. There were small gains for Superior and North Butte.

New Haven was off a point in New York, while there also the decline for Amalgamated and American Smelting. Other issues included Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Smelting, American Can, Steel, Car & Foundry, Central Leather and Brooklyn Rapid Transit. Unusually common had declined a point and Russely preferred 5%.

Speculation Was Stagnant.

Speculation was stagnant in all markets, first hour dullness in New York, stabilized but a little below the opening shares and that for the whole morning being slightly in excess of 38,000. The price movement was as listless as the volume of trading was small. There was no deviation of any importance. While the price range was lower it had no meaning. It would be more correct to say that the market was deadly dull than to assert it was weak.

There was lack of selling pressure and no diminution in uncertainty attending affairs in Mexico continued to hamper operations, and the opinion grew in spite of reports that United States marines might be landed in the Huerta country, that no crisis is likely to be reached for some time. Extreme caution prevailed as regards commitments. Rumors concerning the stability of some of the stronger houses were thoroughly discredited, but they had had some effect in deepening the disgust engendered by prevailing conditions.

Prices Lower at the Start.

Prices averaged a little lower at the start, although some issues were unchanged or a shade higher. Others made quick recovery. At the end of an hour most of the list was irregular. Americans had a stronger tone in London, but suffered more from neglect than from selling. There were few arbitrage transactions in New York and all business in the latter market was confined practically to the execution of a few inconsequential commission orders. Bonds were dull, about as little professional as outside interest in stocks.

There was a spurt of comparative activity during the noon hour, transactions then amounting to almost as much as those for the whole morning. Prices ventilated somewhat, but on the whole were lower, showing more loss early in the afternoon than any other session. Warfare was declared on the bears, where it was alleged that one large agency was offering electrically to buy stocks at a fixed price. This sort Amalgamated abroad and on this side as well. Forced selling of the metal was reported to be at the lowest ebb.

There was no demand from American consumers. While producers quoted copper at 15¾ cents a pound, it was said manufacturers could obtain all they needed from second hands at a lower figure. Export sales for December delivery at 15 cents are reported. Buyers say that when they go into the market for any quantity they will have to be granted material concessions. They believe that they control the situation.

Steel Reports Were Depressing.

Sentiment was depressed by a continuation of adverse reports concerning the status of the steel trade, it being asserted that foreign producers, especially Germans and Belgians, are quite able to hold under the new tariff and that competition from this source is going to be formidable. Its effects would be apparent, it was said, when the new tariff goes into effect on March 1, when, if American consumers were buying nonexist present. The Iron Age quotes steel billets at Pittsburgh at $1.45 per 100 pounds, a decrease of $1 a ton during past week, and 50 cents per ton in December and January. Sheets and open-hearth sheet bars at Pittsburgh, which is rated as iron, valley furnace and bessemer at Pittsburgh, a 25-cent reduction per ton is noticed.

Unfavorable signs of the times are production curtailment and price reductions.

Money Market Was Easy.

The money market was easier today call rates being as about the same level but the bid in New York for sixty-day funds being a little lower. The tendency was downward and predictions of cheap money in the spring were based on Wall street. The Bank of England's weekly statement was investigated. The Bank of France gained about $57,000 in gold last week.

Speculators and financiers heard with indifference that currency measures will be reported by the Democratic and Republican factions of the Banking and Currency Committee on Saturday next. No legislation is expected in this session of Congress and none for weeks after national legislators have convened for the regular session.

They were more interested in a Washington dispatch quoting Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman of the Bureau of Corporations as saying that the Wilson administration was to investigate the cost of living on a nation-wide scale.

"We propose to ask for an appropriation for $200,000 to carry this out," said Mr. Davis. "The investigation will be under the Bureau of Corporations and will delve into every 'trust,' studying their operations and economic history."

Financial News in Brief.

The London copper warrants market was easy at the opening, spot being off 7s. 6d. and futures 5s. At the close spot had declined 10s. and futures 7s. 6d. more. Sales were 400 tons of spot and 1,700 of futures.

Outlook for Holiday Trade Never Better

By BOERSIANER.

It is certain that the ugly handmaid of bear markets, an unfavorable money market, is about to leave, if she has not already gone, and we are now entering into a stronger position. New York's legal reserve status now is completely assuring, and were it not for Paris and London one might face the year-end settlements, adjustments and markets with confident equanimity.

The anxiety in the international situation is European, not American. Mexico now has no menacing probabilities for the American markets. The chances are more than even that if American troops were ordered to cross the border, Wall Street would compliment the military move with a smart rise. That is the way it will street, after it has worried for weeks over a diplomatic imbroglio grown more acute with succeeding days.

Nothing Else Is Alarming.

In the other aspects of the commercial and financial situation there is nothing to provoke a false designation. Some lines of business are quiet, notably the steel trade, which has fallen 20 per cent. below normal. But the extenuating circumstances are familiar; a demoralized steel and iron market, in Europe and in Great Britain, and the inability of heavy American consumers to raise money with which to buy material for purchases.

Upon the other hand, the outlook for the holiday trade was never better. Thousands of preliminary buying forehadows an enormous turnover. There was also some consolation in the government's crop report, showing a larger crop of cotton than had been estimated, a bestowal the more gracious in that it came unawares.

But beyond all the developments of the week—few in number, and with this exception, not of much significance—the chiefest thing one was the statement of the country's foreign trade, the credits abroad are of an unprecedented amount.

At any other time—with the evolutions and convolutions of foreign exchange operating normally—the huge balance in favor of the United States would have a telling effect on the money market here, and sequentially on securities and trade generally. Nothing of the kind will change regulator, is exerting itself to regulate this monetary machine to retain credits in London as long as possible.

Britons on Their Mettle.

The British have been put on their mettle by condition in India and in Brazil. They are striving strenuously to prevent more serious failures in the Orient, and to preclude an explosion in South America. In Brazil untold millions of British money is involved.

The preventive measures are not wholly admirable, but perhaps they are necessary in the case of Sir M. Peacher's financial plan because it is good, but because something must be done," said Rothschild.

It would betray a hardening of the neutral arteries not to perceive that London is to some extent in the throes of embarrassment. Financiers over there have laid all their foreign connections under contributions. Where they cannot effectively "requisition" they try to persuade, and where they cannot persuade they threaten.

This is in addition to manipulating the foreign exchange market to keep gold at home. Upon American bankers the request not to draw down credits has been especially earnest—and effective.

FACT AND COMMENT IN FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

Will the United States government please make arrangements to take over one of our better class railroad systems and conduct the valuable experiment of running it?

• • •

The Pennsylvania Railroad security holders, for example, would no doubt agree with alacrity to sell out to the government on a somewhat lower dividend basis than the road is now earning. Let the government merely guarantee the present dividend rate of 6 per cent., and few stockholders would not grasp an opportunity to approve the deal, while the bondholders would unquestionably welcome the idea of having the credit of the United States placed behind their investments.

A practical and adequate experiment in government ownership and administration of railroads would be invaluable. It would settle many problems of the first magnitude, problems that are beginning to shake the very foundation of our present railroad, industrial and financial system.

• • •

Were the government to demonstrate what many citizens honestly or wrongly believe, namely, that there is enormous waste in the management of our railroads, and that equal or better service could be supplied by the government at lower cost without bringing political corruption, then the country would be grateful to the first magnitude of its railroads.

• • •

This suggestion is not made in jest. It is not made in a spirit of cynicism. It is not inspired by bitterness.

• • •

It is made because the trend toward government ownership is very much stronger than many people, especially those in the financial and railroad world, realize—although President Taft, one of the Pennsylvania and ex-President Mellen of the New Haven, apparently are alive to what is going on, judging by their recent utterances.

• • •

Perhaps the suggestion here put forward is a little beforehand. It may be regarded by some, or even many, as farcical. But let them be assured that the drift is unmistakable.

• • •

In slow-going Britain the government has appointed a commission to investigate the whole railroad status with a view to ascertaining whether government ownership is feasible, advisable or inevitable.

• • •

The New York American is being inundated with anxious queries from holders of their securities whether this, that and the next railroad is in the hands of receivers. I venture a reply is to incur a responsibility that cannot be light-heartedly undertaken. Will correspondents please accept this statement as an explanation of failure to publish opinions on the stability, present and prospective, of various weak systems?

• • •

No human being can today foretell with any degree of certainty whether none or half a dozen railroads will go into receivers' hands during 1914.

• • •

But it may serve a useful purpose, it may interest the Interstate Commerce Commission and other parties interested in the railroads' application for permission to increase their freight rates, to reflect upon a few concrete facts.

• • •

An enormous volume of railroad obligations is about to fall due. The total for the next year has been computed at half a billion dollars. Much of this consists of short date notes, which were resorted to as a makeshift in the hope that times would more favorable terms would be possible before or when these temporary obligations had to be paid off.

• • •

Well, what do we find? What are the conditions at this moment?

• • •

The following figures were prepared for me, at my request:

The Pennsylvania R. R. has $25,000,000 4½ per cent. notes due June 1 next. Were these notes renewed on the income basis at which they are now selling (7½ per cent.), the ADDITIONAL ANNUAL COST TO THE ROAD WOULD BE $750,000. FOR THIS $750,000 THE ROAD WOULD GET NOT ONE DOLLAR ADDITIONAL CAPITAL, but would dividends fare under such circumstances?

• • •

Missouri Pacific has about $25,000,000 5 per cent. notes maturing next June. These are today selling on a 20 per cent. basis, at which RENEWAL OF THE NOTES WOULD ADD $3,750,000 ANNUALLY TO THE ROAD'S CHARGES! Is that fact not calculated to make investors feel uneasy?

• • •

Missouri, Kansas & Texas has $19,000,000 notes due in May, 1915, and if these were renewed on the present income basis the extra burden annually would be $513,000.

• • •

International & Great Northern has $11,000,000 notes to meet next August. If it paid the same rate which the notes now yield to buyers—9 per cent., against the 6 per cent. carried on their face—the additional tax upon the road's treasury would amount to $440,000.

• • •

New York Central, New Haven, Erie, Seaboard Air Line and others are also confronted with the same problem.

• • •

I am not an alarmist. I have no desire to become a prophet of disaster. But I do think it is right and proper that the facts should be presented for careful consideration, especially at a time when the wires from Washington are hot with announcements that every official in Washington from President Wilson down, is sharpening weapons for a fresh onslaught upon corporations, of every class, character and size.

Uncle Sam Should Be the Business Partner of the Citizen

See How the Intelligent Germans USE the Power of Government Instead of Fearing It

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

Germany sets an excellent example in government co-operation with individuals.

For instance:

The great thing in business is to make your customers SEE that you have what they want.

The German government, which co-operates fearlessly and sanely with German industry and commerce, is planning to utilize the moving picture in order to boom German business in foreign lands.

All kinds of work that Germans do for foreign consumption will be shown on films, and these films will be displayed and described by intelligent lecturers throughout the world to impress upon buyers subtly and agreeably the fact that the words "Made in Germany" mean WELL MADE.

The Germans intelligently reason that the people will believe what they can see. And they mean to make the world SEE just what Germany is doing.

Thus we learn that in some ways the German government is more intelligent and useful than our own.

Our government is AFRAID TO USE ITS POWER. About fifteen years ago W. R. Hearst, commenting on the mistakes made by those who indiscriminately denounce what they mistakenly call "paternalism," said to one of his colleagues: "You can't destroy power. If you take it away from government, individuals will have it. If you don't want individuals to have it, you must let government exercise it.

"Our forefathers, establishing this government, were impressed with the abuse of power by the government of England, and tried, therefore, to build up a system under which the government would not be able to exercise full powers.

"Consequently, the power taken from the government was promptly picked up by individuals. And we have seen individuals taxing the consumer through trusts and public monopolies that the government is not permitted to own."

The German government, which is, of course, the richest and most powerful force in Germany, works to help the German citizen, be he big manufacturer or small working man, and gives to the citizen the co-operation of a powerful partner—government.

The German government lends money to the farmer and charges him four per cent. or less.

Our government thus far has been afraid to lend money to the farmer, and the private banker has bled the farmer to the tune of eight and one-half per cent. on the average.

The German government helps the little worker with old age pensions and compulsory benefit funds, and the German workman in his old age is provided for.

Our government shivers with fear at the idea of such "paternalism," and so our workmen, when they are old and worn out, may go to the poorhouse.

And the poorhouse keeper, who is incidentally a grafter, makes the taxpayer contribute for each poorhouse inhabitant, who lives miserably, a sum that would keep him in comfort, happiness and honor OUTSIDE of the poorhouse.

The German government co-operates fearlessly and intelligently with the German shipbuilder, the German colonizer, the German manufacturer.

Consequently, in proportion to her natural resources, the progress of Germany has been at least a thousand per cent. greater than our own, and this in spite of the fact that the horrible army system of Germany compels the people of that country to keep a half million men constantly in idleness in the flower of their youth.

We ought to realize that in our nation the great power is Uncle Sam.

He is the richest, the most intelligent, the bravest, the most resourceful figure in the State.

He does not die. He is not taxed. He has the RIGHT to monopolize and can exercise monopoly without injury, as shown in the postoffice.

HE IS NOT FRIGHTENED BY PANICS and does not run into a cyclone cellar like a frightened banker at the first sign of bad financial weather.

Hitherto Uncle Sam has held himself aloof in time of trouble, or at the most in times of panic has grudgingly loaned his money to Wall Street usurers, giving it to them for practically nothing and letting them lend it out at blood-sucker rates of interest to harassed business men. That is called "government coming to the relief of business."

It is time for Uncle Sam, the big man, the rich man, the powerful, fearless man, to come down from his pedestal and make himself the partner of his children, the big brother of the manufacturer, the farmer, the mechanic and the laborer.

It is time for him to help finance the farmer, to give absolute security and fair interest to the citizen who saves money, time for him to encourage the manufacturer and help the shipbuilder.

You know that Uncle Sam is the richest among us all. He can raise a thousand millions in any year and the country would not feel it.

Yet his power and his credit have never been used to build up the nation as governing power and credit are used so wisely in France and in Germany.

Think of France, a little country that might be lost inside the State of Texas, and remember that the wealth of France per capita is greater than the wealth of the United States.

Imagine what would happen if the little men of wealth, the Rockefellers, the Carnegies and others, imitated their Uncle Sam and suddenly refused to use their wealth in industries and national building.

We should all go into bankruptcy for lack of money, that is to say, for lack of THE COUNTERS OR CHIPS WITH WHICH THE GAME OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY IS CARRIED ON.

Uncle Sam must become the active, aggressive, helping partner of his people, and he no longer a sleeping partner only, opening his pocket to squander millions in time of war and shutting the pocket tight and locking up his treasury against the needs of modern HOLY WAR, which is the war for prosperity, the war to increase fertile acreage, the war against swamps and deserts.

Intelligence in office must make UNCLE SAM the active partner of the people big and little—this need not mean inflation or reckless extravagance.

France and Germany prove to us every day that it means simply common sense.

The Stage Exit

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER VI.

DUSK had fallen on the street outside of the lodging house window when Julia Marvin at last closed the top of the trunk over which she had been bending, and pronounced her own and Caryl's belonging "all unpacked."

"Well, I'm glad that's done!" remarked Caryl from where she sat on one of the two inhospitable cane-seated chairs that were a part of the "furnishings" of their room. The girl had been seated thus for the past half-hour, watching her sister get things to rights, yet she heaved a deeper sigh than the worker had emitted and repeated in a voice indicative of intense relief—"Yes, I'm glad that's done."

The older girl was too dispirited to take umbrage at the selfish remark of her lazy sister. She was tired, not sleepy, but worn out, more in nerves than in body. She still brooded on her fright of the afternoon and shuddered afresh every time that she relived mentally the distressing experience. Caryl, lolling—even in the stern, uncompromising chair — looked pink-and-white and pretty as she idly tapped the bare floor with her shapely foot and hummed to herself.

"I wish we had a better mirror," Caryl complained. "This one makes me feel as if my face was falling off in spots."

"We can't get a palace for the price we are paying, honey," said Julia, gently. There was something in her patient voice that touched the facile heart of the other girl, and she left off gazing at her own reflection to cross the room, and throw her arms about her sister's waist.

"Well, never mind!" she crooned, trying ineffectually to make Julia waltz with her. "The old mirror doesn't make any difference anyhow, and I've been horrid to let you do all the work of unpacking. I'm sorry, Judy, dear, honestly I am. I know I'm a nuisance to you, but I'm going to be good and try my best to help you. I think our room is all right, and when we get a few pictures on the wall—why, it will look really palatial."

Julia smiled and kissed her. "You're an awful little goose, Caryl," she said tenderly, "but I love you for all your nonsense, just the same. No, silly child, I don't feel like dancing. The lodger beneath us might complain, and, besides, I'm hungry and want some supper."

"Well, let's go out and get some," proposed Caryl. Then, as she noted how tired her sister looked she exclaimed, "No, we won't! You lie right down here and rest while I gallop out to the corner and buy our supper at the delicatessen shop. We can make coffee over our alcohol lamp and we'll have a real spread here—a sort of housewarming—shan't we?"

But Julia hesitated. "I don't like you to go out alone," she demurred. "When I remember that man who spoke to us I'm almost afraid to go out myself."

"Pooh!" scoffed Caryl. "I guess I'll have to find my way around town alone sooner or later, won't I? And men here don't kidnap grown girls, as I used to think the gypsies did little children when I was a child. We were changes to be frightened by that old beast this afternoon. He was just trying to scare us, and if he had failed he would have gone off and left us. Now give me fifty cents and I'll be back in a jiffy with a real banquet for us both."

Left by herself, Julia indulged in the so-called relief to tense feminine nerves, and burst into tears. She seldom cried, but now that the floodgates of her misery were open, she buried her face in her pillow on the unyielding bed and sobbed bitterly. She was still sobbing when there came a knock at the door. She sat up and dried her eyes before answering. At the second knock she asked in a muffled voice:

"Who's there?"

The rich Irish tones of her landlady answered. "It's only me, Miss Marvin. Can I come in?"

"I'm sorry," faltered Julia, "but I'm busy, and—and—I can't see you just now."

"Nobody's ever too busy cryin' to stop, dearie," remarked Mrs. Halloran, "so I'm coming in, whether or no."

The touch of sympathy was too much for the lonely girl, and dropping her head upon Mrs. Halloran's shoulder, she began to sob afresh.

"There, now," the kind-hearted woman soothed, "have your cry out. What's distressing you, anyway?"

Suddenly, ashamed of her weakness, Julia Marvin sat up, dried her eyes and tried to laugh.

"Oh, nothing in particular," she said—"only I feel tired and not sure about our future, and you were so gentle and sympathetic that I cried all the more when you spoke to me—for I'm a bit discouraged."

"You'll be that no longer," declared the woman, cheerfully. "And if you are, and don't let me help you if I can—I'm not your friend —do you understand?"

"Yes, I understand," smiled Julia. And as she looked into the beaming Irish countenance she appreciated that even in a strange city there were kind hearts, and this knowledge made her burden seem lighter.

DIVINA COMEDIA

By CONSTANCE CLARKE

WHEN man is born a spark of life divine
Is given him to do with as he will.
It makes for all things great and true and fine—
It whispers, and the brute in him is still.

But man, unconscious that the spark is there,
Denies belief in God, and mocks all creeds—
Content and conscious that the world is fair,
Asking no recompense for earthly deeds.

Content to idly say, "I do not know."
Looking no further than a world of care
That fretful spins its life out here below
While men scorn such an abstract thing as prayer.

And so it is till Fate's avenging fire
Glares on the Paradise where we have trod;
And man, awakened to a new desire,
Drops on his knees, and, trembling, utters "God."

A "Movie" Melodrama In Fashionable Society

And a Dozen Other Things of More or Less Importance to You

How the Amos Tuck Frenches, the distinguished Newport and New York family, and relatives of the Vanderbilts, have been real actors in a strange domestic tragedy which is quite as surprising as anything in the motion picture films, will be told in the Magazine Section of next Sunday's Boston AMERICAN.

And here are a few more of the big exclusive features being prepared for you:

RUINED BY A HUMAN VAMPIRE:

A shocking revelation of how a young cashier was lured to destruction by the cunning wiles of a professional vampire —"But the Fool, He Called Her His Lady Fair."

MY FIGHT WITH A MAD BUFFALO:

Thrilling details of an encounter in the African jungle in which an explorer was desperately wounded and his "moving picture man" killed.

EAGER TO BE PARENTS OF EUGENIC BABY:

Some of the young men and women who are willing to marry each other to assist in the experiment of scientifically breeding better human beings, and to win the cash prizes offered through this newspaper.

THE NEW GYMNASTICS FOR YOUR LUNGS:

Dr. J. Pescher of Paris, France, describes his novel "bottle exercises" for training and strengthening the human breathing apparatus.

EVENING WRAPS AND GOWNS:

Costly triumphs in tailless ermine and other luxurious furs and fabrics, which London and Paris now favor, described by Lady Duff Gordon, the famous "Lucille."

MADAME CAVALIERI'S BEAUTY SECRETS:

The famous prima donna gives here some safe and simple ways of reducing the size of the waist.

WHAT MAKES PEOPLE COMMIT SUICIDE:

Dr. Leonard K. Hirshberg, the distinguished medical writer, says insanity is the real cause and that no one in his right senses can be brave or cowardly enough to seek death.

EVELYN THAW'S STORY OF HER LIFE.

In this, the ninth instalment of her remarkable autobiography, Mrs. Thaw describes the strange emotions she experienced as Harry Thaw's aged mother revealed what the family thought about Harry's bride.

ANCIENT EGYPTIAN DISCOVERIES:

Dr. Paul Schliemann, the great archeologist, discovers musical instruments and orchestration more remarkable than anything we now have and an unwritten law which required that the prima donnas of those days must commit suicide at the moment of their greatest fame.

TO TUNNEL FROM ENGLAND TO FRANCE:

How the horrid channel passage will be abolished by boring a hole twenty-two miles long through the impervious gray chalk.

Is Man Limitless? An Old, Old Question

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

THIS is a long-time, regular stock question, a general problem, and I have been asked this probably as many times as: "What causes a forked twig to turn when carried in the hands over hidden water?" "Which moves the faster, the top or bottom of a cart wheel?" "Will a fish weigh more or less in water on a balance?" "Will the turtle outrun the hare?" "Is Genesis true?" "What is electricity?" "Has there ever been a general flood?" "How big was Noah's ark?" and as many as a hundred more, probably, that come perpetually.

But "Is man limitless?" is a question of so much general human interest that I will make a very weak and ineffectual attempt to answer it. I have already answered it hundreds of times in forty-three years affirmatively, but have not given rigid proof.

Here is a question: "Dear Sir—I was in the observatory several weeks ago and heard you state in a lecture that there are 1,600,000,000 humans now living, but only fifty are able to think a thought that had not been thought before. Did you really mean this?"—T. C. A., Colorado Springs.

I was speaking of the world's mighty mathematicians, and beyond all doubt there are not more than fifty that are able to add to this colossal mass of concrete human wisdom—mathematics.

I do not really know, but it must be true that there are not more than fifty humans now living that have the amazing power to add to the now known integrals. For man is now able to sink sounding vectors into very infinitude. These plummets let fall in space, or, rather, ends of very lightnings penetrating from their source of origin, the brain of man, the most interminable depths, are as endless as space itself.

That is, equations where formidable exponential variables are themselves infinite are already known. These equations are actually infinite.

The reader must reply: "Are the master minds able to solve infinite equations themselves infinite? For let two humans be walking along the street. Both look alike in that both have heads, bodies, arms, hands, legs, etc., and both would be counted as human by the census man. But one is many millions of times more exalted than the other. Between them there is a "great gulf fixed."

If one would like to secure a glimpse, even a short-time view, "through a glass darkly," of the mind power of one of his higher brethren, he can, by studying easy scientific books at first, and then a little more difficult during, say, two or three hours in twenty-four, finally advance to a place where he can sense the incredibly wonderful force concentrated into one of these equations.

Mind power is in a higher state of concentration in a modern differential equation than is mechanical force in the highest dynamite and cordite. This is the question: Is a being that hourly handles infinite things infinite?
